INDEX

In the Spring

a fever seizeth the young man, it maketh him to lie down beside still waters, in the deep grass, and watch the billowy clouds drift by. Here the dreary textbook is neglected and much time is spent in idle dreaming

to the distant strains of the Soph-Senior music, just beyond the Chapel. It drifts over a dreaming campus and swirls up to the waiting moon: this is the romance of spring.

WE HAVE come to the realization that there is a constant and a variable in yearbook production: the constant is the inevitably dry, uninteresting statistical matter essentially unchangeable in form; the variable is the appearance, the esthetic quality of the book. This year, we feel that the INDEX has reached the peak of appeal, an appeal that is fundamentally a result of applied advertising technique. And this book is undeniably an advertisement—of the College, of what it has to offer beyond the classroom. But to the Class of 1939, this INDEX is much more than that; it is the guidebook, the key to memory.

R E W O R D

To MR. DORIC ALVIANI

WE DEDICATE the 1939 INDEX: this is our formal declaration of appreciation to the man who taught us how to sing; who caused the rebirth of the most beautiful in our tradition—the music of our College. He has our blessing: may the renaissance he brought maintain its ambitious spirit; may he be the one who will further its progress.

a - chu-setts. Faith - ful, stur - dy,

This inscription . . .

the symbol of the past and an inference of the future, stands as pithy counsel, too often neglected and unseen, to those entering the campus sanctorum, the Memorial Building.

Snow

paints with transient cleanliness the campus area, in the first substantial amount for several years. This was the gratefully accepted answer to the prayers of the Carnivalists.

Bubble, bubble, toil and trouble; a hundred cauldrons, miniature volcanoes, pour forth heavy clouds of hydrogen sulfide; a thousand concoctions are made and unmade. Beneath this peaceful exterior is an inferno where fire and substance are recipe'd, where the gram is split.

FACULTY

MESSAGE

The College experience was referred to by the late President Hyde of Bowdoin as "the best four years of one's life," and most of us who look back upon it from maturer years agree with this sentiment. Therefore it becomes an important matter to preserve in permanent form a record of these choice years. This, it seems to me, is the function of the Index.

I believe that this book does not need to be elaborate but does need to retain this characteristic under-graduate flavor so that each alumnus, as he looks it over twenty-five years hence, will live again those "best four years."

JOHN EDWIN OSTRANDER

Thirty-eight years of continuous uninterrupted service in the same College is a distinction which comparatively few men earn. Hence, we hail John Edwin Ostrander who was Head of the Department of Mathematics at the Massachusetts State College from 1897 until his retirement as Emeritus Professor in 1935.

He was born at Singerlands, New York, March 20, 1865, the son of John and Catharine, nee Van DenBergh, Ostrander. On September 26, 1888, he married Sarah Cowan of Youngstown, New York.

He attended Union College where he was graduated with the A. B. and C. E. degrees in 1886. Before taking his Master's degree in Arts at Union in 1889, he served as an assistant in sewer construction at West Troy and with the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City R. R. He went to Lehigh University as an instructor in Civil Engineering in 1891. Two years later he became Professor of Civil Engineering at the University of Idaho, where he remained until he came to Massachusetts State College in 1897.

In 1900 Professor Ostrander was elected to serve on Committee VI of the International Commission on Teaching Mathematics and served for eleven years. He was also meteorologist at the Massachusetts Agricultural College Experiment Station from 1897-1928. He died October 19, 1938.

Professor Ostrander was an influential and gifted teacher. His manner was austere yet kindly. "Johnny O", as he was affectionately called by the students, had a warm regard for high standards of scholarship. Serving under four Presidents of the College, his contributions must be measured in terms of the progress made during that period. No one has served the College more faithfully. His work was done with devotion and effectiveness.

THE ASSOCIATE ALUMNI

Alumni of Massachusetts State College have carried the undergraduate training received at Alma Mater into their work in many and varied occupations.

The occupational file in the Alumni Office, listing over 4000 graduates and former students of the College, is divided into some 50 sub-divisions, set up arbitrarily by the "Book of Opportunities" by Platt and Farnham.

A few specific examples of the system of classification are these.

Industry. Bernard H. Smith '99, president, Virginia Dare Extract Company. (Mr. Smith, incidentally, is the donor of the chime in the tower of the Old Chapel).

Agricultural Industry (farming). Vernon (Red) Mudgett '23, owner and operator of Deershorn Farm, Sterling, Mass.

Agricultural Service. Eleanor Bateman '23, market reporter for the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, Boston.

Transportation. Walter L. Morse '95, special assistant engineer, New York Central Railroad (in charge of Grand Central Terminal).

Business. Atherton Clark '77, first vice president, R. H. Stearns Co., Boston.

Graduate or Professional Student. Louie Lyons '18, political and sociological reporter for the Boston Globe, is currently at Harvard where he is studying under a Nieman scholarship. Lyons was one of nine newspaper men in the United States to receive the scholarship, a mark of notable achievement in the field of editing and reporting.

Teaching. Ray E. Torrey '12, professor of botany at our College. Ellsworth Barnard '28, instructor in English at Williams. Julia Lawrence '28, assistant professor of botany at Vassar.

Educational work other than teaching. Starr M. King '21, superintendent of schools, Beverly, Mass.

Professions (other than education). Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait '85, distinguished orthopedic surgeon. Dr. E. Porter Felt '91, entomologist, in charge of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratory. F. Joseph Cornier '26, landscape architect for the City of New York, and designer of that portion of the New York World's Fair which eventually will become a New York Park.

Personal Service. Emil Corwin '25, publicity department, N. B. C.

Public Service. James Nicholson '16, manager, Chicago chapter, American Red Cross.

The approximate present distribution of Alumni in various occupations is, by percentages, as follows.

The word "Alumni" is commonly understood to refer to both men and women graduates of Massachusetts State College. Both Alumni and Alumnae are members of the previously-named clubs and associations, and attend the meetings.

However, for social purposes, Alumnae have formed the following local groups. These Alumnae Clubs bear the same relation to the Associate Alumni as do the Alumni Clubs.

Essex County Alumnae Club
 Plymouth and Barnstable County Alumnae Club
 Hampshire County Alumnae Club
 Franklin County Alumnae Club
 Middlesex County Alumnae Club
 Suffolk County Alumnae Club
 New York Alumnae Club
 Hampden County Alumnae Club
 Worcester County Alumnae Club

CLASS HISTORY

I

To him, the freshman year was a series of brilliant impressions: the campus professors, upperclassmen, fraternities, and with these the entire tradition of a new world. Life became a series of revelations, each punctuating and at once molding the syntax of a man.

That great Sunday in September, that momentous starting-point he will never forget. It was in early noon that an impatient wave of his hand to a retreating car marked his segmentation from proud but slightly worried parents. Then he hurried into the cool newness of Thatcher, pausing briefly to admire the fresh cleanliness of the dormitory, and went into his room. There, he spent half an hour arranging his belongings, when the slow opening of the door disturbed his efforts: his roommate timidly walked in. A quick hand-clasp—it was the first time either had seen the other—a few words of introduction, the mutual mental agreement that they liked each other, and both set to work completing the arrangement of the room. Then downstairs to the reading room. By this time, others were arriving profusely. He carefully noted each entrance, making snap judgments as to whom he liked or disliked. By five o'clock, the reading room was crowded with the newcomers. All felt a certain camaraderie; all were friends.

His sleep was restless that night; a glorious future was his.

The week that followed was a mad whirl of strange events: registration, serenading the Abbey, the Hash House, learning new songs and cheers, exploring the campus, and, most confusing of all, fraternity rushing. Overnight, he and his brethren blossomed forth in maroon caps, which branded them as the most insignificant organisms in creation, designed to be seen but not heard, to be taught, but not to teach. He became but one of a herd, a herd that shivered in the cold mist of dawn and quavered new-learned songs to cruel, giggling coeds; a herd that was pushed through eleven fraternity houses, leaving in its wake cider-stained paper cups and innumerable cigarette stubs. It was during this week that his true unimportance was impressed upon him.

The days slipped by in an endless conveyor belt, each carrying bits to the warehouse of memory. The former camaraderie of his cohorts had dwindled and coalesced into numerous cliques; even he and his roommate found petty differences. Yet he was broadening, absorbing all the custom and prejudice that was to adhere through the next three years. He learned to regard the entire faculty as an enemy camp, the sophomores as a band of vengeance-seekers, the seniors as sacred, all-powerful personalities. Amherst College became a hated institution, more than mere rivals. The coed was the acme of feminine unattractiveness. The College was no longer "Aggie." The cafeteria became monotonous. Home was a distant remembrance; life became more and more cloistered.

He sat open-mouthed through the amazing lectures of an amazing Doctor Torrey, and "ontogeny recapitulates phylogeny" assumed the magic of a password. He soon learned that Orientation had nothing to do with the Orient, but rather the science of the universe and the sage Professor Lanphear. He suffered magnificently through chemistry and mathematics; English composition became the source of insomnia.

With the vacations, he experienced an unusual paradox: at first he felt impatient for home, but once home he felt a tremendous nostalgia for the College. He was but one one-thousandth of the undergraduate group, but he was part of it. The best in his heart was lodged at the Massachusetts State College.

We walked arm in arm for the first time down that long walk from Thatcher to the Hash House. Inside of us, the song of new conquests was singing, and a burning ambition was ours. We saw our fellows drop off one by one, and we sadden to think that June 1, 1939, will never know them. We were proud of the heritage, of the tradition that was ours, and beyond the distant horizon lay our strange new world.

Bleary-eyed, he slammed the door in the fraternity sleeping quarters, the "Ram's Pasture," and shuffled down the stairs to his room. A glance at the clock—he yelled, then groaned: "Five minutes of nine and me with a nine o'clock Military!" He grabbed his R. O. T. C. uniform from the mess on the floor of his closet. He stubbed his toe while pulling on the breeches; he swore that he was glad this was his last year of military training. Without an overseas cap, without breakfast, without the regulation neck-tie, his shirt-tails flying, his Army belt flapping from over his shoulder, his boots unlaced, he ran down the piazza stairs exactly 1.50:2 minutes after he crawled out of bed.

"Damn!" he growled to himself as he ran down Fraternity Row, "if I get half a cut more this week, they'll toss me out of college on my ear. Shouldn't have gotten into that two o'clock bull-session last night—er, this morning—gad!"

In the troop review practice on the football field, he was given six demerits for being late, for a sloppy uniform, and for talking back to an officer. He was "bushed." It was hard work to keep in time—"left . . . left . . . left . . .," to lug the miniature cannon over his shoulder, to march, and march, and march, and march. When his squad halted and came to attention, he dozed off and was left behind half a dozen times.

So the day wore on. . . . By nightfall he was refreshed by the sleep that he had in his classes, for that night his first big date occurred. Only last week, he wrote a letter back home:

"Dear Dad: Last year Professor Torrey told our class to lead a balanced life socially, athletically, and studiously. But when I was a freshman, dad, I didn't go social and go to dances. And you know, dad, how my marks were lousy—of course, I played poker and ping-pong some of the time, but that was only occasionally because I never played on Wednesdays, when I listened to the radio. This year I must meet and get along with people—and maybe go to a few more dances. It's part of my education, you must admit. Give regards to Mother.

Yours for more culture socially,

Sonny

P.S. How about ten bucks for the formal next Saturday? It's very important because I am taking Boxcar Annie. And can I borrow the car, too?"

That night he blew up his chest and, nonchalantly flicking cigarette ashes, paraded in his tux before his fraternity brothers who called him Robert Taylor and fainted in mock astonishment. He was the cock-of-the-walk—and knew it, even though he was only a sophomore. He picked Boxcar Annie up in his car and they drove proudly to the Drill Hall, "the gray barn." Enchanted moments! Neither said a word the whole way.

The dance-hall and the dancing for the rest of the evening was just like a movie. It was his first big affair and he was as solemn as Ol' Man Mose. He shagged and "big-appled" and waltzed like Fred Astaire, that is, whenever he kept off Annie's ample feet. When he finished the last number with Annie, he was sad because it was all over. They drove over to the Candy Kitchen for a snack and later drove slowly back to campus.

At last they were at the entrance of the Abbey. He surprised himself and Annie both by kissing her good-night! He blushed, ran to his car, waved feebly, and sped off. Thrill of thrills! He'd never forget it, never, never. . . . (Passionate sophomore!) Five minutes later he was in the fraternity. After he came in, the boys turned "Once in a While" off the "vic" and invited him to a real good time. "What do you say we go over to 'Hamp in your car?"

So, in a lunchcart first off, they stuffed themselves with pie, coffee, and hamburgers. Afterward they blew suds off beers in a cozy saloon—all but him. He was so embarrassed, however, to sit and twiddle his thumbs that he bought a crooked Italian cigar—his first in his life. He puffed away and talked out of the corner of his mouth. The boys continued to absorb the foamy giggle-water. Then he and his brothers placed his arms around each other's shoulders, forming a huddle, and together harmonized "Sons of Old Massachusetts" a la Statesmen. Very soon the management courteously requested their exit "or do yuh wanna poke in da snoot?!" The boys wiped the tears out of their eyes, resang the chorus to "Sons of Old Massachusetts," and left.

As he drove to Amherst, he still smoked the stogy. He felt a sickly sensation in his viscera occasionally now. The boys sang—he joined them when he was in the mood—and they talked about the dance and the orchestra. One of them was drunkenly nursing a quart of rum.

Back at the fraternity in the wee, wee hours of the morning, he and the boys turned the "vic" on full blast and prepared to open the rum. He threw the stogy into the fireplace—now his tongue felt like a carpet. He tried to kill the taste in his mouth and stomach with a swig from the bottle of rum. One swig led to another. He found himself in fifteen minutes, doing Dean Burns' "towel dance" and yelling "I'm a shwash-bucklin' buc-hic-caneer!" And they tipped the brown bottle oftener and oftener . . . then things grew hazy. . . .

He found himself next morning in total darkness. He was sicker than a hound-dog and that damned stogy made his head feel like a spittoon. "Ohhhhhh, I wanna die!" It took him twenty minutes to find his way from behind the sofa. It took him four days to wear off the effects of the rum and stogy.

Meanwhile, his life continued as aimlessly as when he came in September a brand-new sophomore: a succession of bull sessions, "vic" parties, strip poker games, hell-raising at night then sleeping through lecture after lecture the next day, and scribbling his quizzes so that neither he nor the instructor could read them. Four profs warned him that he was flunking his courses. His dad threatened to cut off his allowance. But he grinned and replied:

"Now I'm holding up the true tradition of a sophomore!"

He shuddered to think of coming to college and "studying." It was utterly beyond his imagination to open his text-books, or even to make believe studying at college.

That mad, beer-filled ride from 'Hamp will never be forgotten nor that first dance, the first taste of the virility of a college man. We regretted laying aside those horrible R. O. T. C. uniforms, for with them passed another great experience, another adventure. But our fraternity brethren, in spite of plans too often malign, were surely shaping the already hardening clay of us. It was a blaze of glory, our sophomore year; the year of the carefree heart and the happy, searching soul.

III.

Like a newborn moth, just emerging from its chrysalis and expanding its wings in the sun, so did he emerge from the shell of "Joe College-ness" that had surrounded him as a freshman and sophomore. To the observer, this would have seemed merely as a discarding of "loud" socks, bow ties, and equally obstreperous mannerisms. But it went much deeper than that: at last he was beginning to orient himself, to feel out his place in the sun.

He returned to State that year already conscious of the evolution within him, which others noticed as well. Somehow, during the summer, he had acquired the poise and dignity of a college man. No more would he experience the bacchanal delights of beer, or cheap rye whiskey; the exhibitionism was gone—definitely—and he swung back from that extreme to a happier medium. And that is the true function of the junior year: discovery of one's self. Yet, there were immutables in his class, those who would graduate exactly as they were when they came; he, however, would graduate with every influence, every shaping force of college clearly visible.

One Saturday night in early spring, he was hitch-hiking his way to a date at Smith. Winter's chill had not yet left the Amherst air, so that he and about a dozen others were briskly thumbing the passing cars, and silently cursing each empty one that roared by. After half an hour, a roadster stopped, and a mad scramble ensued for the precious privilege of a ride to 'Hamp, gratis. There was room for one; luckily, he got there first. On the way, through spasmodic conversation, he learned that his benefactor was a salesman; contrariwise, the discovery was made that he was a State junior.

"What are you taking up at the school," the salesman asked, "farming?"

"Oh, no, I'm majoring in Ec. But I see you really don't know about State, for only a small percentage are concerned with agriculture. It used to be called 'Mass. Aggie,' but that name passed out years ago. Some day it will be a University of Massachusetts. We are turning more and more to the liberal arts."

"Kind of proud of the place, aren't you?"

"Guess I am. One gets that way after three years. It's a small school, and we have a lot of spirit and pride about it. You should see some of our basketball or football games. Even when victory is just about impossible, there's always a lot of fight."

The salesman nodded, sighed, as though he wished he were young again and could go to college, and the ride continued in silence.

Conversations such as this one were the sounding boards of the progress that is characteristic of Massachusetts State. They tended further to intensify any affection for State, an affection that would stand the test of time.

We thought at first that this was no more than an idle conversation, but remember, remember how much we thought about it later. This was the beginning. We shall remember that night.

IV

Eight o'clock, Sunday night . . . but quiet hours had not yet gone into effect in the fraternity house. Abruptly, he slammed down his Modern Drama book, and advanced menacingly into the next room.

"Listen, you guys! I've got a quiz tomorrow, so for the fifth time, will you shut up! Talk about your dates in some other room, and leave me study."

He left, and there was a momentary silence. But soon the conversation was again picked up, and he heard snatches of talk about himself. These sophomores thought he was a grind, through and through; they could not understand it. Inwardly, he smiled. Once, he too whiled away Sunday-night hours with idle "bulling" about—eventually—women. Once, a sophomore, he had an infinite contempt for books and the like; now things were much, much different. He was a Senior. He had discovered himself, and in four years had metamorphosed through four successive, but entirely different stages. Now a cold indifferent world, a world of fierce competition and bloody dollars, was outside, waiting for him.

He shuddered, picked up his books, and left the house for a relatively quiet evening in Goodell.

On returning to State that fall, he went through the same thrill he had experienced on returning for his sophomore and junior years: the joy at seeing familiar faces, on hearing the same old quips. He spent several days observing the new crop, the class of '42. Between him and this freshman group, there was a vast barrier, acquired painfully in four years; somehow, he as well as they sensed this intangible difference. They all seemed so naive, so innocent! He knew that once he was like that, but he could not conceive himself as being as immature. Yet, he was disappointed in that he was not given the respect he thought he deserved: as a freshman, he had dreamed of the day when he could go strutting across campus with a white "M" on his expanded chest, and be pointed out by awe-inspired freshmen (most particularly, the coeds) as a Senior, and a true Big Man On Campus. The dream dwindled and faded down to little in reality. Once in a while, however, he had some priority when it came to dates with coeds; once in a while, the respect due to him was given.

The Great Change had boiled down to one word: maturity. His parents, ever patient with him, were immensely proud of that change. He wrote home less often now for money; when he did write, his letters were more serious—and sometimes soul-baring: the confidence they sought for was now theirs.

He sailed evenly through finals with a minimum of difficulty, for at last he had mastered the art of learning the written fact. When the second semester came—it always came too rapidly—he began thinking in terms of a job. This was his only consuming ambition, and it served to make him eager to get out of school. Vaguely, though, he realized that inside of him there would always be a yearning for State. Some day . . . he would return.

Our beautiful campus is bathed in moonlight; silver liquid is the College Pond. From afar, through the soft June air, we can hear the progress of the last affair, the Soph-Senior Hop. And from afar, we can hear the calling of something more immense, something more profound than college could ever be. This is our last night at State; tomorrow is the Beginning. We gather in the fraternity house, our little group, and sing together—for the last time, probably—the songs that will always be in our hearts. "There is a certain College" will echo forever; if we are sentimental at this moment, it is because something will ever beckon in the Valley; we shall always miss you, State.

ACTIVITIES

*Second Row: Cain, Beck, Terry, Prouty, Gove, Paul

resounds from the walls of Bowker, a figure prominent in academic activities steps forward to the front of the stage, Dean Machmer presents a small gold medallion, a brief handclasp, again applause: this is the formal recognition given to long hours of service. This is the manifest function of the Academic Activities Board; this is the brief moment of glory for the honored students.

A sign and symbol of the close relationship between the faculty and student body, the Board is composed of two faculty appointees, two alumni appointees, a general manager, the President of the College, and the business managers of each student academic organization.

First recognized in 1932 by the Index, the Board continues to render a service to the student body. A Conspicuous Service Award is given each year for outstanding achievement in academics of a senior student; similarly, an award is given to a manager in the form of a fifty-dollar prize. It is also at the Insignia Convocation that the other awards are presented: the silver, gold, and diamond-chip medallions, earned on the basis of specified credits. Yet, except for the intrinsic satisfaction of a duty well performed, the medallions are the only material rewards for the exacting work required on the publications, forensics, drama, and the musical clubs.

ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES BOARD

Designed to please the eye and activate the memory, the 1939 Index cherishes the ambition that it will stand out among all yearbooks as a thing of beauty as well as a statistical compilation. The Board hopes that the innovations it has introduced will serve to set a high standard for the annuals to come. Among these innovations, the following can be considered as really outstanding: the enlargement of the senior section with the inclusion of an informal snapshot of each senior; the humble attempt to make the activities section as something to be read; the extensive use of color throughout the book; and above all, the presentation of a new section, "Features," which has the objective of showing not only the graphic side of the College, but also the lighter or more humorous side of college life. And it is the Features section that we ask you, critical reader, to pay the greatest part of your attention. We have felt that there was need of such material, since nowhere else on this campus is there any publication objectively designed for entertainment and comedy. It is the wish, further, that in time this section may be divorced from the Index, such as the Quarterly has been successfully separated from the Collegian, and stand on its own feet, in the same class as a Lampoon, or a Purple Cow, or a Voodoo. We hope that this will be our major contribution to the extra-curricular activities, and that if our ambition falls short of its goal, our only excuse will be that it was the first time we tried.

Yet, it is almost three decades now that no attempt has been made in the Index to draw a laugh as well as a

First Row: Prof. Dickinson, Shipman, Miss Cooper, Branch, Fisher, Parmenter, Miss Nichols, Dr. Goldberg

With make-up ranked by Omar Hite, New York Times associate editor, as the "best in New England and among the best in college papers throughout the country," the Collegian has tried to attain balance in appearance and in policy. Started under 1938-39 editor-in-chief H. Emery Moore and continued under present editor Arthur A. Noyes, the paper had adopted a balance in appearance that is the result of copying the style of the best daily papers, while the balance of policy is the result of a plan of campus disinterest that seeks to impartially "look at the campus from a distance" and give all local news sources space in relation to their news value.

Not radical but progressive, the Collegian has adopted an editorial policy of questioning established tradition and "making it justify its existence." The change in the name of the College to "State" and the recent adoption of the A.B. degree are both, in part, results of Collegian campaigns and the paper has started on another crusade that will some day end with Massachusetts State College becoming Massachusetts State University. The Collegian has expressed itself in favor of a reading period before final examinations and has gone on record as favoring an increase in the College's building program from nothing to at least a new women's building. To aid in the campaign for a new building for the women's division, the paper published an extra edition early in February outlining the work and the needs of the coed department. The edition featuring an editorial "Build or Bust" was mailed to the members of the state legislature and to other friends of the College.

“What Ho!”

“Thar she blows! Let’s go, O scribes. . . .”

With this ringing fanfare in the Massachusetts Collegian, the literary supplement—Collegian Quarterly—dropped like gentle rain from heaven, a la Shakespeare, and made its appearance on campus. The faculty and the Collegian’s business manager realized that State College students possessed talents stoppered up like genii in wizard’s bottles. State students can write. Professor David Morton, well known Amherst poet, admitted it upon reading an issue, when he said that the magazine had above-the-average quality. What is more, last year an undergraduate had an article published in the American Mercury. By popular request, a creative writing course has been included in the list of courses. One of this year’s sophomores is zipping off a prospective play for the Roister-Doister production next fall. And the Quarterly’s 1913 Spring-Summer issue, a gala double-decker, will prove that State authors are riding the crest of the waves.

“Brother-poet, Can you spare a rhyme? Hoity-toity! back to the garret, ye scribes—back to the spiders, cobwebs, dusty cheese, and stale ale. . . .”

Jumping through painful stages of a four, six, and eight-page supplements, the Quarterly advertised in the Collegian, lassoed contributors, and finally in the 1938 Fall issue let down its hair to metamorphose into a modern magazine form. Thus the Quarterly is becoming as much a part of State College as Razoo Night, or Dean Burns, or “Doc” Torrey’s four-dimensional lectures.

Resolved

Another Thursday—the College is again dragging itself involuntarily to Convocation—but as the students take their places and glance up to see who the speaker is, they grow interested—there is a good sized group of students on the platform—all looking very thoughtful—of course— it's the Debating Team—all set to debate with Boston University.

Our team looks a bit tired, but it's no wonder. They say they debated down in Philadelphia just last night—a radio debate, too. There's an iron man act for you! Leonard Levin, Henry Winn, Dean Terry, and Herbert Weiner with Professor Prince have just returned from a week's southern tour, going as far as Washington, D.C. The boys have been debating on two questions for a solid week—Resolved: that the United States should cease to use public funds for the purpose of stimulating business—Resolved: that the United States should follow a policy of isolation toward all countries engaged in war outside the western hemisphere.

In fact, these two questions are the only questions of the year. Upon them the team has debated with the American University from Washington, D.C. as well as with the seven teams which they visited on the tour and this Boston University debate. What is more—they have coming an interesting week-end trip to Norfolk Prison. The boys say they should expect to get beaten there—they seem to think that they'll be put up against lawyers who have gone wrong.

As the cross-country runners sprint in the last few yards between the cheering stands, figures in maroon and white march in military precision up the center of the field. A whirling baton, a blow of the whistle, and the marching men form into a huge "M." A raised baton, a hush, and the band begins the Alma Mater, while those in the stands rise to their feet and sing.

Discipline is a keynote of the precision of both the marching and playing; smart uniforms clothe the spirit which has been so characteristic of the reorganized band. And in recognition of their five years of brilliant, steady, advancement, the band held a special Christmas Concert this year. Joseph Paul, present manager, there signalized this progress with a tribute to former manager, Samuel Snow '35, who so successfully reorganized the band in 1933.

Not only did the college band present a concert to commemorate its past achievements, but it also insured their maintenance by making other appearances throughout the year. During the Fall the band played at every home football game; and later in the season it traveled to Medford as part of Mass. State's contribution.

The band has become increasingly excellent during the past few years, not only because it has had strong leadership and willing instrumentalists, but also because it has added yearly to its physical equipment. Thus, in keeping with this policy, a few new instruments were acquired this year to secure added quality, and a new uniform was purchased for the coed drum-major to augment the band's already pronounced

ORCHESTRA

Entering Convocation one Thursday early last fall, upper-classmen were considerably surprised to find a student orchestra of some thirty-odd members ranged on the stage. Remembering last year's shaky orchestra of eight members, students were not quite sure that they were at State College as they took their seats. They had hardly settled down for a comfortable snooze, when the orchestra awakened them with stirring strains from Jerome Kern's Showboat. At first the audience reaction was one of irritation at being disturbed; but as the orchestra played, the audience responded. Attracted by sad melody flowing from a dozen violins; transported first by the clear call of trumpets to the virile atmosphere of war-time, and then to a tropical river isle by sweet lure of woodwinds, students decided that the orchestra's music could be very delightful, and their applause became more enthusiastic as each piece ended. The orchestra dipped into classical music and ran the range down to near popular contemporary music, playing Victor Herbert favorites.

Following its re-birth at Convocation, the orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Alviani and the management of Robert Cain '39, embarked on a season of activity unprecedented in recent years. Its first new triumph was the waking of Stockbridge School Convocation just as it had awakened State's. It won high praise for a performance before a Union Agricultural Dinner in Worcester; it played at Roister Doister productions; it thrilled the Social Union audience with Dvorak's Slavonic Dance; and finished the season by careful construction of background music for The Mikado.

Enthusiasm

When Doric Alviani took the Men's Glee Club to New York City in May to fulfill an engagement at the World's Fair, it probably wasn't half the lucky break for Grover Whalen that it was for the Glee Club. The guests at the display, currently being held on a dry spot in the Flatbush flats, have heard many college glee clubs so far this year and will probably hear many more, if they can't get standing room at a fan dance, but no college group will be heard at the Fair this summer that can compare with the meteoric rise of the State College Club.

There are just as many good singing voices at State College as any other institution of the same size but it took Doric Alviani to prove this fact to the student body. When Alviani came to State in September the Glee Club was running neck and neck with the model airplane club for campus popularity. By November the Glee Club was one of the most active organizations in the College. A series of concerts have been presented by the Club throughout the year. The first performance for the group was in Concord on November 18, and since that time the men have sung at many campus activities and in numerous towns and cities in western Massachusetts. At times the men's organization has joined with the Women's Glee Club to present combined concerts which are, of course, twice as good.

The outstanding characteristic of the Glee Club has been one that all Alviani-coached musical organizations share—enthusiasm.

Coed Canaries

Founded in 1934, the Women's Glee Club hummed its way through to 1938 when Doric Alviani took up the slack in the reigns and turned out a polished group that soon found favor with the students.

The first program for the women was on November 3 in Northampton when the Club established itself as a worthy representative of the College. The next month found the women giving a concert at Florence on December 5 and then joining with the men six days later to sing at the First Congregational Church in Amherst in the morning and at Vespers in the Memorial Building the same evening.

The women's club gained its first campus fame when students coming from the Goodell Library week-day nights would hear the sounds of the club's rehearsal coming from the Memorial Building. The sounds weren't too bad, either, and when the students got used to the idea of musical organizations practicing, they used to remark that Alviani had a nice sounding club. Perhaps the most common remark that students would make when they heard the coed canaries was "Doesn't that Alviani fellow ever sleep?"

Perhaps he doesn't. We don't know, having never asked him, and there isn't a spot of Winchell blood in our whole system so we never tried to find out by the other accepted method, but one thing we can be sure of is that measured in terms of performance, Alviani doesn't sleep on his job.

Quartet A hush falls over the assembled students in Bowker Auditorium. The gentle sound of a pitch pipe is heard and the college quartet: John Osmun, Myron Hager, Stuart Hubbard, and Milton Auerbach, in order of descending tone, begin to sing, "De Old Ark." The catchy and well regulated tones flow forth to delight an audience, which seldom shows better attention than when listening to the boys. The song ends and the roof and walls of Bowker quiver with the burst of applause.

Double Quartet A double quartet, under the management also of Milton Auerbach, has been formed this year as part of the new musical program. In addition to the regular members of the quartet, it includes: Charles Griffin, Paul Keller, Gabriel Auerbach, and Arthur Washburn. The double quartet has not made many appearances, but has added a very humorous touch to the spring concert of the Musical Clubs with the number "M.A.C. Memories," a burlesque, in costume, of the "good old days."

QUARTET

DOUBLE QUARTET

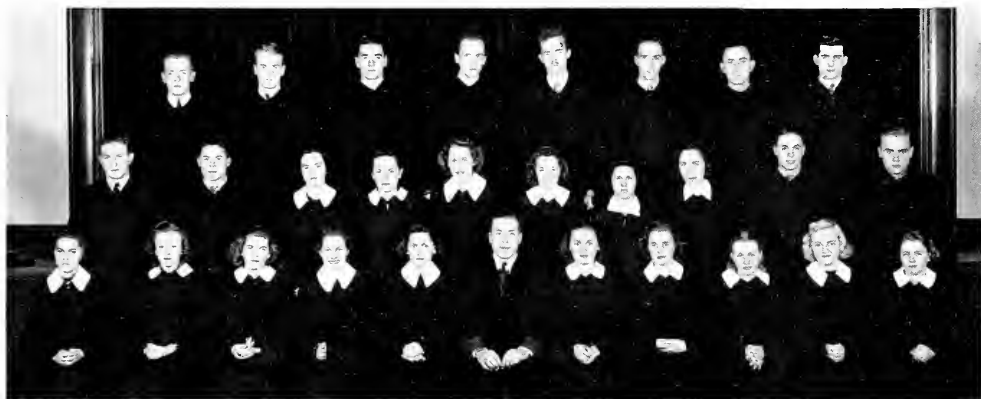

Misses Moulton, Berthiaume, Archibald

Trio Not to be outdone by the men with their quartet, several girls on the campus have formed a trio this year. The soprano of the trio, Betty Moulton, is also its manager. Gladys Archibald sings alto, while Margaret Berthiaume is a mezzo-soprano. The "Statettes," as they are popularly known, whose capabilities range from light operatic selections to popular numbers, have been an immediate hit with the students. The trio furnishes a welcome refreshing release from a world of classrooms and books. The Statettes, too, are making special appearances and radio broadcasts.

Choir A year full of increased musical interest and activity has brought an enlargement of the college choir. Instead of appearing only once a week at the Vesper services, the choir now makes outside appearances. An organization has evolved, through long hours of rehearsal, that gives pleasure to large public audiences with its smooth renditions of a diversified repertoire.

ROISTER DOISTER

Lights dim; a hush falls over the audience; and the curtain goes up on another Roister Doister performance. It is June 11, 1938, and as the Diamond Jubilee commencement play, the college dramatic society is producing that historical first English comedy from which the society receives its name—Ralph Roister Doister.

Then again, the curtain goes up on the evening of January 20, 1939. This time the Roister Doisters are producing a modern play—recently on Broadway. It is the well-known Stage Door, written by George Kaufman and Edna Ferber. Again, it is excellently chosen with an eye toward the casting of the large number of available actresses. Though seemingly in lighter vein than some of the Roister Doister productions, it might well have been put on with an idea toward the plea of "saving the theatre from Hollywood."

This would be entirely in keeping with the policy of the Roister Doisters; for the purpose of the society is not only to entertain the College with two plays each year, but it also seeks to bring before the College, which is presumably an intelligent audience, the best that the drama has to offer, not only in entertainment, but also in what might be called education. In this way it seeks to rise above the level of the common professional stage and screen. Hand in hand with this program, whenever possible, the society sponsors speakers well-known in the field of the drama. Thus, we see that the Roister Doisters are concerned with more than the mere glamor of the

WINTER CARNIVAL COMMITTEE

When the people of Massachusetts went to the polls last fall and put the Republicans back in office they should have expected a return to the old New England customs of fifteen years or so ago when the G. O. P. was last in power. One of the first moves of the new administration was to bring back the old custom of having snow in the winter. Ice was also added as a special attraction.

Undisturbed by this freak of nature the Winter Carnival Committee went ahead with its plans for the February frolic and substituted skiing, skating, ski-joring and tobogganing for the usual May Pole dancing, and hoop rolling. February 10 and 11 found snow still on the ground and Chairman Robert Packard was faced with the difficult task of making the Carnival live up to its name.

Packard and Company turned out a finished product and the 1939 Winter Carnival will be recalled as the outstanding social event of the College year.

The Carnival opened with a Langlauf over the campus and many entered in the event were surprised to find it wasn't an extra long loaf of bread, but a Norwegian word for cross-country that the committee had copied out of a book to show that they were qualified to hold competition in winter events.

Ferdinand the Bull sat on his—whatever bulls sit on—in front of the Theta Chi House to win first place in the snow sculpture while King Winter sat on the same thing, next door, and gained the second prize for Phi Sigma Kappa.

Elocutionists

Freshmen and Sophomores! What rivalry there has always been between these two classes! In matches of physical or mental skill, there has always been a spirit of keen competition. For this reason, the student's anticipate the Burnham Declamation Contest, which is held in May of each year. Weeks before, roommates are subjected to the painful ordeal of listening to aspiring elocutionists. This year no women entered the competition, leaving the field open for the men. As usual, all entrants presented their selections in a commendable manner. It is always difficult for the judges to decide to whom the award should be given. After much deliberation, the judges honored Charles Gleason, '40, with first prize, and Alan Silverman '41, with second prize.

The other speakers, who were by no means far behind in ability to the prize-winners, were John V. Osmun '40, John Filios '40, and David A. Frank '41. And this year, the judges were made up of past winners of the contest: John Hoar, Chairman, Frank Brox, Beryl Briggs, John Glick, and Arthur Sullivan.

“Auld Lang Syne”

shook the very walls of Bowker Auditorium as vigorous Doric Alviani led group singing to close the twelfth annual State College Dad's Day. Some 600 dads and mothers—for what Mother would let Dad come alone to visit son or daughter at college—were guests of students for the day.

All that morning I had been expecting Mother and Dad and, after my classes were over, I kept looking out the window for that family car. When it turned in the driveway and came to a jarring stop—Dad never could learn to drive our new car—I waved and then couldn't help running down to meet them. Mother was a little timid about coming into a fraternity house, but I pretended not to notice, and led the way proudly to my room.

After registering, we all went to the Horse Show. Mother and Dad had never seen the show before and were quite thrilled: first by sophomore horsemanship, then by the demonstration of mounted drill presented by sixteen juniors, and finally by the riding and jumping exhibition given by the seniors. Mother and Dad enjoyed the football game in the afternoon too—Dad liked Chet Conant's long run which beat Coast-Guard, but Mother preferred the singing of the Alma Mater between the halves. She did not enjoy the fraternity skits in the evening so much, however; they were a little too risque she said. But I heard Dad chuckling to himself more than once. Phi Sigma Kappa was awarded first place for its fashion show, Kappa Sigma second for a burlesque of the college band, and Lambda Chi Alpha third for a skit entitled, “As They Knew Us.”

DAD'S DAY

A bonfire of spruce and pine burns briskly, sending streamers of sparks and flame to the sky. The ghostly flames flicker in mottled light upon the faces of the cheering crowd. And as the cheer leaders pound their megaphones and shout, "Mass. State will win," the crowd breaks; freshmen and a few hardy upper-classmen snake up the long road to Amherst—where two groups confront one another in excited bewilderment. For it is the eve of the Amherst football game. There among the crowd are the members of Adelpia who have organized the rally and who are helping the Senate in the task of preserving order.

In similar rallies and torch-light parades Adelpia takes an initiative part. When the Red Cross asks for contributions, it is Adelpia that organizes the response. Student forums, too, become an integral part of the program.

Adelpia is purely and simply honorary, and should be regarded as such by the student body. In view of the fact that the juniors tapped each May have been extremely active in their first three years, it is not the intention of this society that the newly elected men carry on an extensive program of campus activity in their senior year.

Election to Adelpia should be regarded as a reward for conspicuous achievement as well as a recognition of outstanding personality and qualities of leadership. Adelpia strives farther to promote good fellowship and to foster the highest ideals, both in the sphere of its own society and in the world of campus

SENATE

A crowd of rough-looking Sophomores have gathered in the "Mem" Building. Apparently, everyone is waiting for something to happen. At last, a couple of upper-classmen, wearing black Senate hats, emerge from the Senate room, ushering a half cocky—half subdued Freshman out the front door. Immediately, a gang of Sophomores who have somehow heard of the trial, seize the victim, drag him down to the cold pond, and toss him in. The Senate has just been dealing indirectly with one of its big problems—that of putting the incorrigible Freshman in his place.

But this is merely an incident in one of its many functions; for the Senate is the student organization whose business it is to govern campus affairs. This year it has been unusually active and progressive. It has introduced new rules for Freshman rushing; in order to prevent fraternity and sorority control of student elections, it has modified the nomination rules; and in accordance with changing conditions it has changed the regulation of the Maroon Key and altered the Senate Constitution. To bolster the growing spirit at games and rallies, the Senate has decreed that cheer leaders should be selected by competition and that girls be allowed to compete.

For what may perhaps prove to be a most important contribution to the college, the Senate this year has set aside a sum of money with which moving pictures of campus life may be taken. Here will be a permanent record more vital and more potent than any number of descriptive words.

Abbey Serenade

Time-out has been called! And while the cheers of the grandstands combine with the triumphal blare of two opposing bands, the two rival teams relax upon the lime-striped field. From the State bench a figure comes running—with water for the thirsty and towels for the damply weary. But this seemingly insignificant, this tireless “frosh-capped” figure is not a glorious one; but he is a symbol of the service and efficiency of the sophomore honorary society, the Maroon Key.

If one should, on an early fall morning, go to the other side of the campus, he would see a strange scene. A double-line of maroon-capped men stands at military attention. Small “Bibles” are held in the hands of each man; songs are solemnly sung; and dramatic scenes of “ring-around-the-rosy” are enacted. Here is an explicit evidence of the Maroon Key’s early task of teaching the freshmen, ostensibly to serenade the “Abbey,” but actually to learn the songs and cheers of Massachusetts State College.

The Maroon Key also serves the College in a less dramatic way. During the past year it has welcomed hosts of visitors to our campus and has greeted and entertained visiting athletic teams. In fact the society has made such a distinct impression on these visitors that many have expressed appreciation that similar organizations are instituted upon other campuses.

Efficacy

During the past year, midst a storm of discussion, the Honor Council has carried on its work in its usual just and fair manner. Despite efforts of certain minority groups to discredit the basic principles underlying the honor system, the majority of students and faculty have faith in its efficacy. The Honor Council exists to help, rather than to hinder the student. Through this group, as chief spokesman for the system, the student is encouraged to set up high standards of honor for himself, and also for his classmates.

The purpose of the Council is to uphold and to interpret the Honor Constitution; to try, and convict or acquit any case of alleged dishonor and to file a report of such action with the President of the College. All action is initiated by the students, independently of the faculty; in this way, students feel that the system belongs to them, and they are justly proud of it.

In 1934, a clarification of the purpose of the Constitution was made by the student body, and several amendments were added. In 1938, the O'Connell case established the power of the Honor Council to interpret its Constitution even above faculty ruling. To date, seven cases have been tried by the Honor Council this year.

By the election of high character to the council and the earnest effort of students and faculty to stimulate enthusiasm and cooperation, the integrity of the council will be insured.

HONOR COUNCIL

STUDENT RELIGIOUS COUNCIL

A peaceful hush lies within the Memorial Building. For a little while the bowling pins and jazz are quieted, and only the lovely strains of Bach are heard—coming from upstairs in the building. Up there Jew, Catholic, and Protestant are united for one brief vesper hour. They are gathered to hear a speaker, who will bring a message pertinent to every student, whatever his particular faith or creed may be.

The Inter-Faith Conference was perhaps the high-light of the religious program this year. On December third, the Inter-Faith Parley, under the leadership of William Foley was held. The chief speakers were Reverend J. Thoburn Legg of St. John's Methodist Church, Newburgh, New York; and Dr. Everett M. Baker, ex-vice-president of the American Unitarian Association—Protestant representatives; Rabbi H. J. Schachtel of West End Synagogue, New York City—Jewish representative; and Father J. B. Sheehan of Our Lady of the Elms College, representing the Catholic element. Round table discussions were held, and plans were made for a permanent Inter-Faith Conference. Not only members of the religious organizations on campus participated, but also students from Amherst, Brown, Mt. Holyoke, and Springfield Colleges.

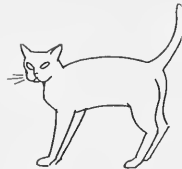

Because it believes that the moral and spiritual sides of a student's nature are as important as his physical and mental development, the Council strives to foster a spirit of fellowship among all faiths. It is eager to sponsor any activities which will be conducive to a greater understanding of human problems and relationships.

W. S. G. A. for breaking it."

Yes, the co-eds are quite particular about obeying the rules which the Women's Student Government Association lays down and which the Council of seven members is ever ready to enforce.

Each year the association sends two of its council members to a conference for the heads of similar associations of co-educational colleges in New England to discuss problems of student government.
Last spring Elizabeth Clapp and Marjorie Esson were our two representatives. From this conference sprang the idea of the Senior Processional, which was an innovation here last June and which promises to become a tradition on our campus. This spring was an important one for the W. S. G. A., for it saw Massachusetts State College playing hostess to this New England Conference.

One of the most important events which the W. S. G.
A. sponsors is the annual Mother's Day week-end in the spring. In addition to these activities, this year the Association has worked to improve the room which is used by the women commuters. It is apparent, then, that our W. S. G. A. council has many more pleasant tasks than just laying down rules.

Marching Freshmen

A long line of marching figures, bewildered faces bobbing through the night, a short halt, and then an enthusiastic line of hand-shaking men. It is Freshman week for the "open-house" rushing. And in charge of each group of marching freshmen is an Interfraternity councilman. This marks the beginning of the fraternity life of the freshmen, and also officially opens up the round of activities for the Interfraternity council.

Twenty-two stalwart "Greeks" gather monthly to govern the relationships of eleven fraternities. Representing their own fraternities in legislative powers, they make the rushing-rules, organize the Interfraternity Ball, and support the Winter Carnival. And under its supervision the fraternities compete in athletics, a declamation contest, in snow-sculptures, and in the annual "Sing".

There is a real need for such an organization. For mutual differences are arbitrated; and common problems meet impersonal consideration by carefully chosen delegates. Each year the Council, in seeking to maintain the unity and strength and to preserve the ideal of the fraternity system, sends a delegate to the National Interfraternity Convention.

Thus the task of the council is two-fold. It owes an obligation to the fraternities it represents; and it seeks also to advance the interests of the college, whose support makes possible the continued existence of the fraternity system. For the college itself was founded upon the fraternity system of housing and upon the values and ideals each tries to preserve.

Sorority Good Will

Two co-eds meet on the campus. One is wearing a conspicuous pendant on which are to be seen several Greek letters. The other girl somehow has the appearance of being a Freshman. Both look as though they were dying to say something to each other, but they merely smile and pass. What can it mean when two girls have nothing to say?—sh! It's rushing time, and the Intersorority Council has decreed that there shall be silence between sorority girls and Freshmen. Woe be the sorority that gets caught evading Council's rules!

The Intersorority Council takes charge of all competition between sororities, notably the annual Intersorority Sing and Declamation Contest. The Council each year presents a plaque to the winner of this contest. It also presents a plaque each year to the sorority which maintains the highest scholastic average.

The Council, moreover, takes an active part in regulating combined social activities. It supervises the annual Round Robin Patroness' Tea; it works for the cooperation of the sororities in presenting entertainments such as those of Mother and Dad's Day; and it has charge of the annual Intersorority Ball.

Perhaps the most important innovation of the Intersorority Council this year was the change in the rushing period. This year it was held a month earlier than in former years, thus eliminating a month of high tension among all the co-eds. For it remains a fact that wherever there are sororities, there is the big problem of how to rush "Freshwomen".

WINTER CARNIVAL BALL

Crystal balls casting patterns on the dance floor—wild rhythm of Glenn Miller swing—hilarious shouts from the blonde Marion Hutton—Japanese snowballs flying—beautiful girls—gay youth—it's the night of the 1939 Winter Carnival Ball—a night for laughter, fun, and merry-making!

The girls are looking especially lovely tonight for a celebrity is here, who has come especially to select the Carnival Queen. He is the famous cartoonist, Sydney Hoff, who has shown his good taste by selecting Ann Cooney for the throne. For the queen's court, he has selected three more of our girls—Betty Bates '40, Marjorie Tying '41, and Priscilla Durland '42—also Helen McCarthy of Springfield and Shirley Haller and Phyllis Gladdin, both of Smith College.

Jefferson Machamer, the well-known artist, has drawn the program—a nice little souvenir for the girls—containing the added attraction of the words to You'll Be Gone Tomorrow, the song by Bob Ullman and Art Noyes, which is being introduced to the campus tonight by Glenn Miller. It looks as though the song is already a hit.

Down at one end of the hall a group of people seem to be having lots of fun. They are watching a bashful couple go through the agonies of having a picture taken. This is one of the big novelties of the ball. Each couple here will have as a favor its own photograph by Garber. We'll bet that there will be a good many laughs over those photographs in the years to come, but very likely they will be accompanied by sighs of "Why must such nights end?"

SOPH-SENIOR HOP

A great yellow moon was flooding the Connecticut Valley with light on the evening set for the Soph-Senior Hop. Its pleasant light had transformed the campus into a shadowy fairyland—not a sleeping fairy land—for on every campus walk white-coated men and girls in long gowns were strolling toward the Drill Hall arm-in-arm. The preliminary strains of Artie Shaw's music mingled with the warm breath of the June evening, and gay laughter belied the twinge of sadness that the Soph-Senior hop must have brought to every senior as he approached the last dance of his undergraduate experience.

As each couple exchanged tickets for the favors—compacts for the girls and programs for the men—and stepped onto the dance floor, a storm of colored snow flakes engulfed them. Drifting lazily or swirling madly, tiny spots of a hundred colors were being flung from a multi-faced grass crystal above the dance. Across the ceiling and walls they danced—so realistically that one would expect to see flakes fall from his clothing. Gradually as couples swung lightly past on a gleaming yellow floor, the hall became a fragrant, timeless dream of color and rhythm. When Artie Shaw's shrill clarinet rose above the rhythm of his orchestra, faster and faster, higher and higher, the dream became a tourbillon and the dance a whirling race of swing. The clarinet solo ended and dancers relaxed on the crowded floor, until the "King of the Clarinet" took off on another flight. The music was too good to dance to; and an admiring crowd gathered around the musicians to watch Shaw as he inspired his band or led it to new heights with his

Sweet Swing

The first touch of green has appeared on campus; and the lushness of day turns to a velvety softness by night. Moon-glow and shadow undulate in rippling patterns on the college pond. But turn from the shade of the sleeping campus to the light within the Hall!

The rustle and flash of swirling silks—bright colors of spring and pastels of softer hue strike vividly against the white jackets of the escorts. And as the couples cease to stroll, and an expectant hush fills the air, the orchestra begins to play. Sweet swing, the graceful waltz, the spirited rhumba, the langourous tango—into each mood and rhythm the orchestra successively glides. Patterns of light flash and fleck the floor, shifting and streaming from the globes above. Dancers wheel and dip and pivot.

Tommy Reynolds has more than lived up to his reputation. His six-man trumpeteer section, distinctive among even the leading bands, played as one man; and Tommy's clarinet justified all advance hopes.

The Greek holiday was embellished by a two-fold beauty: the beauty of Spring itself, and the distinctive beauty of eleven campus co-eds, competing for the honor of becoming the Queen of the Ball. Competing were Virginia Gale, Dorothy Plumb, Marjorie Tying, Betty Bates, Eevlyn Gould, Doris Dyer, Erma Alvord, Phyllis Drinkwater, and Martha Hall—coeds all!

Decorations

in cavalry colors, blue and gold, transformed the bare walls of the Drill Hall into a magic setting for the annual Military Ball on Friday evening, December the second. On that evening, you might have seen tall, erect young men helping lovely creatures from cars in front of the hall. Some of the girls floated along in chiffon or regally rustled about in crisp taffeta. Those men who were military majors appeared in the full glory of their uniforms; others came in tuxedos (although the tuxedo-clad males must have felt that their attire lost much of its splendor in comparison with uniforms). There is something about a uniform which makes even the most ordinary looking man seem handsome and distinguished.

All is glitter and magnificence at the Ball. As Ray Keating's orchestra started to play and the couples drifted out onto the gleaming floor, you would have been impressed with the great panorama. Soft lights, the dimness of the hall lighted up with flashes of color. A girl in a red-satin gown contrasts strikingly with a girl in misty white chiffon. Now the couples are gliding along to a slow tune; now the tempo changes, and they are spinning and twirling to a fast number.

The climax to a colorful evening comes with the installation of Alberta Johnson '40 as honorary colonel of the Massachusetts State College R. O. T. C. There is a loud expression of approval and admiration as retiring colonel, Dorothy Nichols '39, presents the cloak and insignia of office to her successor. Chairman Cadet Benjamin is the object of envy as he escorts the charming honorary colonel through a double line of military majors.

MILITARY BALL

INFORMAL COMMITTEE

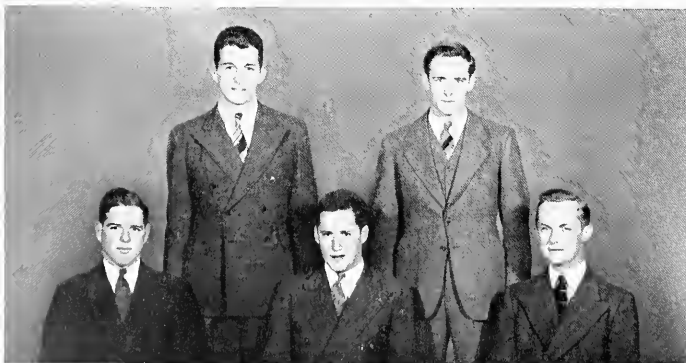

"About a quarter to nine" many a smooth young lad calls for a sweet co-ed, and takes her to the informal. It would be difficult to say whether formals or informals are preferred by the students. Anyway, at the informals everyone forgets his reserve and really enjoys himself. Dignified seniors and unsophisticated frosh alike may be seen "jiving" or doing some other of the latest steps. In spite of all the opportunities which most students have to learn to dance well, we still see a few who need some lessons; many still dance in the 1930 manner.

The informal dances have been more numerous this year than ever before. They are especially popular as fitting climaxes to an important football game. October fifteenth, after the Rhode Island game, an informal was held, the Lord Jeff Jesters of Amherst College supplying the music. The following week, students again eked out fifty cents from their allowances, and danced to the sweet strains of Johnny Newton's orchestra. "Vacation night" informals are always well attended; possibly students think it relaxing (?) to have one grand pre-vacation fling. Anyway, there was plenty of fun and frolic at the "poverty" dance on Tuesday, November twenty-second. Another informal on January thirteenth gave the "grinds" one last chance for recreation before finals started.

For making an enjoyable evening possible to all students, and at a moderate cost, the informal committee deserves credit!

INTERSORORITY BALL

"May I introduce you to the receiving line"? asks a pretty, chiffonish young woman, as Miss Co-ed with her escort steps into the artistically disguised Drill Hall to the peppy rhythm of Jimmy Walsh and his orchestra.

The hall is crowded with nice looking young women in lovely spring-like gowns (for this is the first big formal dance of the spring) and their escorts, among whom there seems to be a number of good-looking, though strange, young men—some obviously dazzled or confused. Yes, it is the co-ed's big night. It is April twenty-first—the night of the Intersorority Ball.

Among the guests we find Colonel and Mrs. Horace T. Aplington who are leaving us this June. Mrs. Aplington has been a well-loved patroness and we shall regret to see her go, just as much as we shall regret to see the Colonel leave.

The girls have again called in professional decorators to deck the Drill Hall. They have found this to be the only satisfactory way of doing it; for without the help of strong masculine hands on the Ball committee, the girls would be at a disadvantage in competing with other ball committees—Not that the girls couldn't do it, of course!—They certainly had a great idea when they devised that bar that is attracting so many couples. Oh, don't get excited—it's only a Milk Bar with sodas, frappes, and nice gooey sundaes.

It doesn't take long to see that, for all this fun, we must thank our committee, headed by Bernice Sedoff, with Nancy Parks, Constance Fortin, Eleanor Ward, and Marjorie Shaw. It looks as

Centaurs

R. O. T. C. It is a warm June afternoon. The usually bleak, muddy corral, for just one day in the year, has taken on a bright, festive appearance. Gay pennants fluttering—pretty girls in the stands—handsome cadets—spirited horses—yes, another Commencement Horse Show is at hand, and the boys are waiting tensely for their chance to “show their stuff” and walk off with the prizes.

But now the show is beginning. A class of mounted cadets is entering the corral. What are they doing? They just seem to be walking around in circles. Oh, but now they are beginning to trot. Of course, they are being judged on their horsemanship. At last, they go into a canter—and the dust begins to rise—settling on the clean white hats and suits of the interested spectators. When they are done, the judges call to the center the four best. One of the ladies present comes forth with a loving cup which she tries to present to the winner. But being unused to ladies, the horse shies. However, with the aid of the Colonel, the cup is presented to the cadet, and later ribbons are attached to the horses. Then, on with the show!

The thrilling part of the program comes with the Senior Cadet jumping. The first horse comes galloping toward the hurdles. Everyone holds his breath. Will he make the jump? No—the horse shies off to one side. The rider must start all over again. This time he goes over, and on to the next hurdle. It is a thrilling sight to watch these military Centaurs, but we are glad when the show finally comes to an end without a single casualty.

1938 ANNUAL R. O. T. C. HORSE SHOW

On Friday, June 10, 1938, the 17th annual R. O. T. C. Horse Show was put on under the direction of a committee of Cadet Officers from the Senior Class, comprising Norman Blake, Floyd W. Townsley, William B. Avery, Warren S. Baker, Jr., Davis W. Beaumont, Frank F. Carr, Richard R. Irving, and Robert K. Morrison.

The judges were Lieutenant Luther L. Willard, Cavalry Reserve, '35, and Lieutenant Anthony J. Nogelo, Cavalry Reserve '37.

The Stowell Cup Award for proficiency in horsemanship was awarded to Cadet Sergeant Ralph L. Foster, '39.

Winners were named in the seven classes of the show as follows: Class 1, Junior Cadet Schooling—

Class 1, Junior Cadet Schooling—

1st, Robert H. Muller; 2nd, Robert E. Cain; 3rd, Everett Roberts; 4th, Donald H. Cowles.

Class 2, Senior Cadet Jumping—Course B—

1st, Warren S. Baker; 2nd Marshall B. Allen; 3rd, Robert D. Buzzee; 4th, Donald S. McGowan.

Class 3, Sophomore Cadet Schooling—

1st, Robert F. Dunn; 2nd, Dominic E. Nietupski; 3rd, Franklin Hopkins; 4th, Robert I. Sheldon.

Class 4, Senior Cadet Jumping—Course A—

1st, William B. Avery; 2nd, Herbert E. Brown; 3rd, Cyrus E. French; 4th, Norman P. Blake.

Class 5, Co-ed Schooling—

1st, Betty Abrams; 2nd, Jacqueline Stewart; 3rd, Doris Jenkins; 4th, Frieda Hall.

Class 6, Junior Cadet Jumping—

1st, Emerson W. Grant; 2nd, Henry G. Andersen; 3rd, Clifford E. Lippincott; 4th, Robert S. Cole.

Class 7, Mixed Pairs—

1st, Cyrus E. French and Doris Jenkins; 2nd, Davis W. Beaumont and Kathleen Cooper; 3rd, Floyd W. Townsley and Jacqueline Stewart; 4th, Norman E. Linden and Nancy Parks.

ATHLETICS

A YEAR IN SPORTS

The outstanding event in the 1938-39 sports history of Massachusetts State College was the passing of hockey as an intercollegiate sport. Early in March, after a great deal of study and discussion, the Joint Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics voted that, until more favorable ice conditions arise, hockey should be dropped to the status of intramural competition.

The reasons back of this move were two: (1) Weather conditions in the Connecticut Valley, for the past few years, have not been favorable for an outdoor rink on the College Pond, as the chances of cold weather and good ice, for even two or three games of the schedule, are quite slim. (2) All of State's opponents save one are able to use artificial ice or sheltered rinks for practice and games.

There is a possibility that some day there will be an artificial ice rink in Amherst. Both State and Amherst Colleges are now without hockey and both have the material for representative clubs. If the colleges, in the distant future, could ever raise the money for the building and the upkeep of a small arena, there could be hockey teams at both ends of town. A sheltered rink—an enclosed rink of natural ice—would not be practicable as this section of the country has too high a temperature average to keep the ice in good condition.

TENNIS

As hockey bows out, tennis makes its bid for rating as an intercollegiate sport. With new courts and fair tennis material, State should be able to present a team that could hold its own with such colleges as Tufts, Vermont, Springfield, etc. This Spring tennis was a big-time intramural sport and should be able to make the jump into varsity competition by 1940.

NO "PROS"

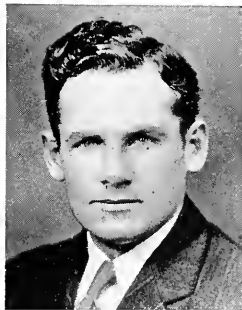

When the class of '42's football team went through an undefeated season and boasted backs that knew more than the Notre Dame shift and ran, blocked, passed and kicked just like they do in other colleges, the student body was convinced that these men did not come to State because they thought it was a nice place to study. When the frosh lineman averaged in the 180's and played football as if they had seen the game before, the student body was convinced that State had gone out and bought some "ringers." When two or three students first called the frosh gridders "ringers," most of the college fell for the line and we now hear talk of a new policy for sports that should put us near the top in collegiate rankings.

The policy of the Physical Education Department remains the same—State does not buy its victories, but at the same time the Department encourages good athletes to consider enrolling here.

Not just in football, but in track and cross-country there seems to be a trend toward more representative teams. The class of '41 boasts more good track material than Coach Derby has seen in five years and the long-distance plodders that hill-and-daled last fall for the frosh should put State back the winning column.

HARD TO WIN

We don't like to sound pessimistic but present indications are that while football and track are enjoying better days, the basketball and baseball teams will be finding it hard to win games. For some reason the sports cycle doesn't seem to bring these sports together and State fans will always have good teams to cheer about and poor teams to moan about. Next year's basketball team will be made up of this season's substitutes. When the '38-'39 varsity was forced to watch the last two games from the stands, the subs played very good ball to defeat R.P.I. and scare Boston University, but unless Coach Bill Frigard invents a collapsible basket, next year should find many opponents out-scoring the Maroon. The hoopsters biggest asset will be fight—one quality every State basketball team boasts—and with Howie Rudge, the acme in that forte, leading the club there may be surprises.

Baseball, next year, would be one of State's strongest sports if the Maroon didn't have to take the field half of every inning and let the opponents take a turn at bat. In the field, the Statesmen will have many things to be desired while at the plate, the Maroon should be able to make life rather unpleasant for any pitcher offered by the foe. Carl Twyble, one of Carway's "four aces" this Spring will be the only moundman on the '40 club with varsity experience and looms to be the only pitcher, worthy of the name, in college.

For the third straight year the outstanding sports at State College, based on the win-loss column, were swimming and soccer. Baseball rates mention but the honors go to the less known sports coached by Joe Rogers and Larry Briggs. Rogers' swimming teams couldn't get by Williams this winter but every other opponent on the schedule took the Maroon's wake during the season. Next year should again find the swimmers up among the best in the New England League as the frosh ducks boast good material.

The soccer team reached the high point in its season when it fought the national champions of Springfield College to a 1-1 tie.

REVIEW of the 1938 FOOTBALL SEASON

As football all over the country continued at its high peak of professionalization, Massachusetts State's amateur gridiron edition continued its poor win and loss record as the fall of '38 found spirited but unqualified wearers of the Maroon bowing six times throughout a nine-game schedule to the experience and weight of hired opponents.

Not all the foes of the Statesmen were of professional rating as Coast Guard, Tufts, and Rensselaer, still play football for love of the game and love of the college. Against these simon-pures the Maroon played close, hard-fought games winning twice and dropping one decision. The loss was to major rival, Tufts, in the season's nightcap by a 7-6 count.

A. I. C. Game

The first game of the season came on the last Saturday of September and found Ebb Caraway's charges getting off on the right foot with a 12-6 win over American International College on the local field. It took a 55-yard touchdown jaunt by sub-back Art Cohen following a pass interception to turn the tide and the game was in doubt up to the final whistle.

Bowdoin Romps

The next week found the Maroon traveling to Brunswick, Maine for the annual meeting with the Bowdoin Polar Bears. Bowdoin ran through and passed over a fighting but incapable State eleven to a 32-0 win. Bowdoin showed promise of two good seasons to come when a wealth of Sophomore talent in the third and final quarters picked up where the upperclassmen left off and continued to worry the Maroon defense.

Conn. State Wins

The pros made it two in a row the next week at Storrs when Connecticut State overpowered the Maroon 19-0 in spite of the gallant efforts of Leo Santucci, half-pint local fullback, to stem the Blue wave.

FOOTBALL SEASON

Rhode Island Game

October 15 found Massachusetts State facing the hardest opponent on the schedule as Rhode Island State visited Amherst. Defeated only by Holy Cross and led by Duke Abbruzzi, sophomore ace who had counted twice against the Cross to gain top honors in the New England scoring race, the Rams were favored to run all over the Maroon. When the dust of battle had cleared, Rhode Island was a 20-0 victor but every State fan went away from the game proud of Caraway's men who had outfought the Blue and carried the play to the opponents in all but the first period of the game. This game marked the first appearance of Lou Norwood as a regular at end and insured him of the flank post.

W. P. I. Wins

Unbeaten and untied Worcester Tech was the next visitor to Alumni Field. Paced by Forkey and Gustafson, the Engineers presented one of the strongest small college units in New England. Not until the final period, however, were the visitors able to get anywhere against the Maroon defense. With but ten minutes to go, Forkey intercepted a State pass and after two grounded tries arched a scoring pass to Gustafson to give Tech a 6-0 win.

Amherst Too Good

With 350 house party guests and hundreds of returning alumni looking on, the Maroon made a losing bid for the Town Title bowing to Amherst on Pratt Field by a 35-0 count. The Soldiers of the King had little trouble running through the State defense and the Statesmen had more than a little trouble breaking even on yardage. Vic Pattengill and Hartley Joys led the Amherst touchdown march with two markers each while outstanding luminary for the Maroon was little Leo Santucci who brought both sides to their feet with a 55-yard dash down the sideline for what looked like a State score until the officials ruled that he had stepped offside on the Jeff 35.

FOOTBALL SEASON

State Tops Guardsmen

Back on Alumni Field, the next week before 500 fathers visiting for Dad's Day, the Statesmen hit a winning stride and downed a fighting Coast Guard Academy squad 7-0 when alert Chet Conant intercepted a Middie pass in the final period and romped 95 yards to a touchdown. Don Allen drop-kicked the extra point.

Two in a Row

The next week found the Maroon at Troy, New York handing Rensselaer its worst defeat of the season when Al Irzyk scored twice and Barrel Harding, Don Allen, Leo Santucci and Brud Malcolm all counted once with Allen picking up one point after the touchdown. The final score found the Maroon leading the Cherry and White by 37-0 but the game was not the walk-away that the results would indicate.

Tufts Game

The season's final was played in the Medford Oval in a driving storm that nullified the State passing attack and gave the advantage to the ground game of major rival, Tufts. A touchdown by Chet Conant in the first period gave State a first half lead of 6-0 but the Jumbos came back in the third period to tie the score when Art Griffin raced through the whole Maroon team and romped 35 yards for a score. Griffin booted the point after to put the Brown and Blue out in front by a 7-6 count and State was not able to threaten the lead. The final period found the Jumbos trying to make sure of their first win of the year and pushing the Statesmen all over the muddy Oval. Four times in the last fifteen minutes, the Maroon held back the Jumbo attack from inside its own 10-yard line and all but three minutes of the last period were played in State territory. The game ended with the Barnums knocking on the State pipeline.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Breaking even over a fourteen game schedule, the State basketball team ran true to form during the 1938-39 season winning upset games and dropping decisions to teams that should have been swamped.

First Win

The hot-cold Statesmen opened the season on December 13 with a warm-up 41-22 decision over Lowell Textile. The cotton-workers were held to three field goals and four fouls for the first half of the game when Coach Bill Frigard put everyone but "Bish" into the game to make it a little more even. The last half, however, was much the same as the first with Johnny Benben and Howie Rudge whipping the net quite often to keep the Maroon way out in front.

Middlebury was the second club to bow to the Statesmen, coming to State on December 15 to leave with the short end of a 39-25 pasting. Johnny Benben again paced the victors.

Christmas Spirit

After Christmas vacation the Statesmen just couldn't get over the holiday spirit and gave away the next three games. First foe to take advantage of the Santa Claus frame of mind the players were in, was Springfield. In a game played January 7 in the city of homes, the Gymnasts handed State a 51-31 set-back as Captain Stan Zelazo was the only bright light in the Maroon line-up. Four days later the Statesmen looked horrible in dropping a 51-38 decision to Williams at Williamstown. Captain Zelazo again led the State attack and was also pretty much all of the State defense.

January 14 found Amherst visiting the State court to pin a 34-31 defeat on the forces of Frigard. After trailing the Soldiers of the King by ten points mid-way in the final period, the Maroon came to life and with Johnny Benben leading the way almost turned defeat into victory, but time was too short and the Lord Jeffs managed to retire to the south end with a very shaky win to their credit.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Too Tall

Worcester Tech's giants didn't need any spirit of Christmas to topple the Statesmen on the home court January 18 as they capitalized on their height to defeat State 63-36. Fran Riel found his eye and paced the Maroon attack but the height of Raslavsky and Wells was too much.

Wesleyan was the next club to visit the Cage and went away on the short end of a 32-30 count. Morningstar, Cardinal star, was held to less points than he would care to recall by the combined efforts of Fran Riel and Frank Southwick while Zelazo, Glick and Rudge caged just enough markers to turn the trick.

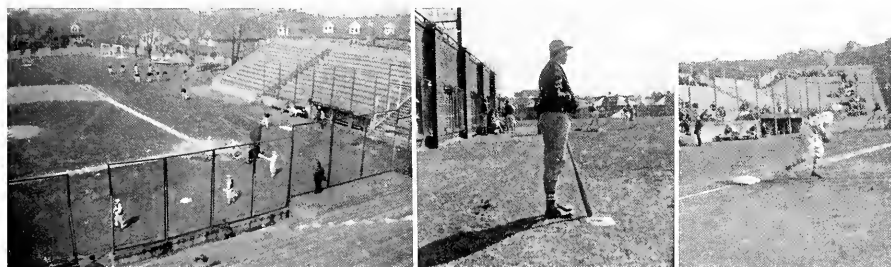

Rhode Island State's over-publicized high scoring Rams showed the first signs of their coming slump in New England rankings when the Maroon played even till the final few minutes and lost by only a 54-37 score. It was the first game this year that found the Rams under 60 points.

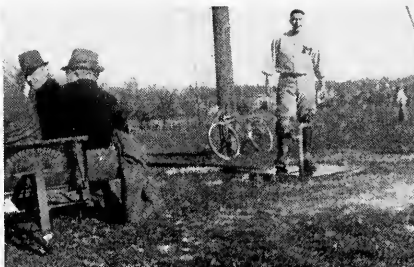

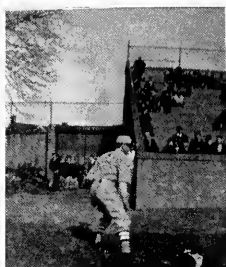

Winter Carnival night found Coast Guard Academy an easy nut to crack as Zelazo and Glick paced the locals to an easy 53-22 win February 10.

Beat Amherst

Employing every bit of their power and drive, an aggressive State team evened the count with Amherst on February 15 by setting down the Lord Jeffs 40-37 at the Amherst cage Johnny Bennen and Herb Glick counted in the final second of the game to give the Maroon a win after a hard well-played encounter. Jim Reed, lanky Jeff center, was high scorer for the game and was the whole Amherst attack.

Connecticut State visited State on February 18 with a team that was not rated too highly, but the Storrs team looked good to the Maroon, With Peterson, Donnelly and Yusiewicz whipping the net from all angles for the victors, State was lucky to escape with a 58-47 beating.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Top Tufts

Major rival Tufts was the next foe to draw the attention of the Frigidarmen. Visiting Medford on February 22, the Maroon edged the Jumbos 42-41 and surprised everyone but themselves. Never behind, State watched its early lead dwindle but hung on just long enough to win. Zelazo led the Maroon scoring with Bemben and Riel close behind.

New Team

Between the 22d and the 24th of February three regulars on the squad were dropped and the second team took over their duties. R. P. I. was the first foe to be met by the new State team and bowed 60-52 on the home court February 24. A new star was found when Sophomore Bill Walsh who had been sitting within a short reach of the water bucket all winter, came into his own and paced the State attack with 16 points while usually steady Zelazo and Rudge added the veteran's touch that kept the new club together.

Final Game

The season came to a close on the local court the next night with strong Boston University dropping the Statesmen 41-32. So well did the State reserves play in the final game, that the Boston team would not believe that they were playing against only two regulars. Walsh had another field day scoring 15 points while Captain Zelazo closed his career with an outstanding defensive exhibition.

BASEBALL SEASON

The 1938 varsity baseball team took up where it had left off the preceding year and, before losing to Amherst, stretched its number of consecutive wins to twelve. It recorded ten wins and three losses.

Connecticut State Stopped

Behind the pitching of Fran Riel, the team opened with a 3-1 victory over Connecticut State.

The next game was an 18-4 swamping of Williams. Fred Riel, Cliff Morey, and John Bemben collected ten of sixteen State hits. Sloppy Williams fielding at crucial points characterized the game.

In the first home game behind the five-hit pitching of Norm Blake, the Statesmen defeated Bowdoin 4-1. Playing again on Alumni field with Bokina and Frank Fanning performing the pitching duties, State nosed out Worcester Tech 2-1.

Michell Too Good

State's hopes for its thirteenth consecutive win were thwarted on the following Saturday by an Amherst set-back 5-0. Bill Michell, big Amherst pitcher, set the locals down with no hits and no runs while Fran Riel yielded nine hits and five runs.

Boston Best

Although John Bemben pitched a beautiful four-hit game in the next game, Boston College emerged with a 2-0 victory over State.

Five in a Row

Disaster overtook the Statesmen in the Tufts game at Medford. Although the team beat Tufts 6-4, it lost its captain for the remainder of the season when Fred Riel broke his leg on a slide to second. However, in the next game Frank Fanning, supported with homers by Tappin, Bush, and Towle, hurled a 9-2 victory over Wesleyan. New Hampshire was then set down by the two-hit pitching of Johnny Bemben 1-0. Springfield was the next victim by a score of 4-3. Fran Riel pitched a 4-3 victory over Trinity.

The season ended with a defeat by Union 8-7. Errors with men on base cost the game.

Spring Trip '39

During the spring vacation of 1939, the baseball team took a trip through Pennsylvania, winning two games, losing two, and tying one.

Behind the pitching of Frank Fanning, the team battled to a 1-1 tie with East Stroudsburg State Teacher's College on Monday, April 3.

Home runs by Steff and Bemben were not enough to offset eight State errors as the team lost to Moravian 10-8 on Tuesday.

Lafayette, We Are Here !

Six-hit pitching by Twyble, a homer by Tappin, and an improved infield combined to give the Carawaymen a victory over Lafayette 3-1.

Fran Riel Invincible

Fran Riel's four-hit pitching produced a 4-1 victory against Lehigh on Friday.

Although it made a desperate rally in the eighth the team could not overcome an early Long Island U. lead and lost 6-4 on Saturday, April 8. Bemben, in a relief role, pitched five hitless innings.

SOCCER SEASON

Making a defensive record that has been beaten only once before in State soccer history, the varsity soccer team came through a tough season with three wins, two ties, and two defeats. In seven games only six points were scored against the team; three of the games were shut-outs, and not more than two points were scored in any one game.

Dartmouth Defeat

State's hopes for a repeat of last year's victory were dashed in the first game at Hanover when Dartmouth scored a 2-0 victory. Although State goalie Wilson was outstanding, and full-back Stan Podolak sparkled on the defense, the Big Green's first line was too much for them.

Victory at Storrs

On October 8, Connecticut State provided the first State win 5-0. Earl Bowen netted two goals and Captain Bud Rodda, Tom Lyman, and Whitey Johnson each got one.

A Walkover

The following week, Fitchburg State Teacher's College was swamped by the Briggs-men 4-0. Although the game was sloppily played at first, Roberts and Schoonmaker took good advantage of penalty shots, and Bowen slipped the ball past the opposing goalie twice during the game. Frank Simons played capably in this game and, as usual, Podolak, Auerbach and Wilson turned in a creditable performance.

Springfield Stopped

Accomplishing what Harvard, Yale, and Dartmouth had failed to do, the Statesmen tied Springfield 1-1 in a hard-fought battle on Alumni field. In the first quarter Lyman headed to Rodda who slammed the ball past the goalie for the first score. Springfield got its goal in the third period. Lou Wilson was sensational in the State goal, making save after save. Rodda and Podolak also starred.

"He Conquered All His Enemies"

Suffering a let-down from the Springfield game, State tasted a 2-0 defeat on October 28 in a game with Amherst. The Maroon forced the play for the whole first half, and it looked like State's day. However, Amherst took the offensive in the second half and scored goals in the third and fourth periods.

Trinity Tamed

State returned to the win column on the next Saturday at Hartford where the team beat Trinity 5-0. This game was characterized by the best passing and headwork of the season. Bowen headed in the most sensational shot of the game, and Podolak, breaking up almost every Trinity threat, was brilliant.

A Tie With Wesleyan

With the war cry of "Get Hammarstrom" on their lips, the Statesmen played a brilliant game against Wesleyan to end the season with a 1-1 tie. State was in Wesleyan territory most of the game, but the Cardinals managed to get by Wilson in the last quarter. Saul Klamann and Clem Burr deserve much credit for bottling up the high-scoring Wesleyan center, Hammarstrom. All the seniors played exceptionally well.

CROSS COUNTRY SEASON

A write-up of Captain Larry Pickard would be the same thing as a review of the cross-country season as the Maroon harriers have nothing to boast of but their captain. With Larry never finishing behind third place for the third season in a row, the State cross-country team finished the 1938 schedule with a not too successful average of .200 made by one win in five engagements.

N. U. Wins

In the first meet of the season October 8 at Franklin Park, Boston, Northeastern ran the Staters into the ground 17-37 as the Hub team's sophomore ace, Sam Drevitch, edged Pickard for the first position.

Lose to M. I. T.

Coming home to run M. I. T. in the second meet of the season October 15, the Statesmen lost 25-34 to the Engineers for their first loss to the Techmen in four years. Pickard won the race easily but could have been home in bed when the next Statesmen finished and as a result M. I. T.'s strength won out.

Only Victory

October 22 the Maroon runners tasted victory for the first and only time when they downed Worcester Tech over the State course 19-41. Larry was again in front having a 31 second lead on the field and the rest of the Derby pack was close enough behind in this race so that the Maroon captured five out of the first six places.

Fourth Place

Ten days later the Connecticut Valley Intercollegiate Cross-country championships were run over the Amherst College course and State captured fourth place in a field of nine. The meet was also scored as a dual encounter with Amherst and the Soldiers of the King gained a 26-30 victory. The Jeff meet marked the rubber meeting between Pickard and the Amherst captain, Phil Moyer. Larry had won in his sophomore year and Phil shaded the State captain last year. After running neck and neck for the greater part of the race, Larry pulled ahead of Moyer and won the final decision.

N. E. I. Meet

Running again on the Franklin Park course in Boston, the Statesmen took tenth place in a large field in the New England Inter-collegiate championships. This tenth place spot marked a drop of four positions from the year before. Pickard placed ninth in the field of almost two hundred for the only Maroon showing worth reviewing.

Final Race

The final meet of the season was November 12 at Troy where the experienced Rensselaer Poly team handed the local hill-and-dalers an 18-37 beating. This race was a fitting climax to Larry's career. Running with a leg injury, the State captain was once as far back in the pack as tenth place and at the half way mark in the race it looked as though Larry would be lucky to crash a fifth place. With less than a mile to go, however, Pickard turned on a drive that put him in third at the final wire just a little way back of the R.P.I. captain, John Dugan and his teammate, Vic Head, who are rated as two of the best runners ever to wear the Cherry and White of the Troy institution.

HOCKEY SEASON

The 1939 hockey season was nothing to cheer about but was probably as good a way to usher a sport out of intercollegiate competition as any. At the close of the '39 schedule the Joint Committee on Intercollegiate athletics announced that starting next year hockey was to be an intramural sport and gave as a reason the fact that State's hockey foes practiced on artificial ice and were not faced with the same problem of warm weather and no ice that was always haunting the Maroon pucksters.

The win-loss column of this last season backs the Committee one hundred percent. The record of Coach Ball's club was four lost and one tied.

During the Christmas vacation, the hockey team took part in the Invitation Lake Placid tournament winning one game and dropping two. In the tournament State opened with Hamilton and lost by a 3-1 count. This loss pushed the Maroon into the consolation round against St. Lawrence where the Statesmen were easy 5-0 victors. The locals, however, bowed out of the semi-final round of the "sob" series when M. I. T. applied the whitewash.

The first game of the regular schedule was on January 4 with Northeastern University on the College Pond. A lucky State goal was not enough to hold the Huskies and N. U. won easily 5-1.

The next two games were played away from home, one in Clinton, New York against Hamilton and the other at Providence, Rhode Island with Brown. The Hamilton game was slowed to little better than a standstill by poor ice and the New Yorkers edged the Maroon 2-1. Three days later on February 10, the Maroon visited Brown and suffered a 7-2 loss. Chet Conant made his first appearance for the Maroon in this game plugging up the holes left when Mayo, Buckley and Dalton were forced to leave the squad due to serious injuries.

The following Tuesday saw a Union team, led by insuppressible Coach Duke Nelson visit the College Pond. Both teams played poor but rough hockey and the game was interesting and close from the beginning. With Union ahead 4-3 and just seconds to go, Bob Peters tied the count and the game ended with the score 4-4.

The final game on the slate was with Boston College on the local ice February 19. The Eagles were undefeated and untied when they visited Amherst and they were quite set back when State got off to an early lead. With Lefty Flynn and Pryor leading the way, the Hub team soon found itself and outplayed the Maroon to a 5-2 victory.

Although the State hockey team had a poor record it can boast the outstanding New England small college player in Captain Cliff Morey. With little if any defense, Morey guarded the State goal so well that every visiting team went away singing the praises of the State captain. Without Cliff in the nets, this season, hockey games would have been scored with an adding machine.

SWIMMING SEASON

Hailed last year as the "miracle man of New England coaches," Joe Rogers continued to show the justification of this statement in the 1938-39 swimming season when his mermen finished their schedule with the very good record of winning five out of six meets.

Only Loss

Starting with an inexperienced club, the Statesmen found powerful Williams much too powerful and the January 12 papers carried a story about the Ephmen dunking the Maroon 54-21 in the Williamstown pool. The Purple crew, paced by Tom Crede, ace dash man, paired with Ken Cook, took everything but the visitor's swim suits. Co-captain Andy Andersen, George Pitts, and Legs McCallum showed up best for the Statesmen while Salmela proved himself in the dives.

First Win

January 14 found the Statesmen winning their first meet of the season at Worcester where they sank the W. P. I. mermen 48-27. Pitts, State sprint artist, pushed Reddick, W. P. I. ace, to new college and pool records in the sprints. Reddick, however, was the only Tech splasher who worried the locals and the strength of six firsts and five seconds was too much for the Engineers.

Close Meet

Wesleyan was the first opponent to face the Statesmen in the local chlorine and a large Winter Carnival crowd saw the Wesmen almost edge the Rogers aquatic circus. With the score standing 36-32 in favor of State and the free-style relay, a seven point event, the only race left before the end of the meet, the crowd was treated to one of the best races yet seen in the State pool when the Maroon managed to capture the relay and win the encounter 43-32. Heroes of the victory were Parker Jones, Co-captain Herb Howes, George Pitts and Legs McCallum who gained the relay win.

Easy

Coast Guard Academy would have been better off if they had stayed home for a nice hot shower February 17 when the Statesmen dunked them easily in the local pool 58-17. The superiority of the Maroon swimmers was seen at once as they won easily and took first and seconds in the 220 and fifty yard free style with McCallum, Andersen, Pitts and Jones doing the stroking. The locals captured first in every event save the 150 backstroke in which Hammond of the Middies caught John Prymak sleeping in the backstretch.

Easier

On February 24 swimming at Storrs in what Connecticut State College likes to call a pool, the Maroon won easily 54-21. In this meet the Rogers medley relay team turned in their best time of the season. As the Conn. State bathtub is a lot shorter than the average pool two of the State swimmers got crossed up and stopped swimming before they came to the end of their races and as a result the Nutmeggers were able to sneak through to two firsts. Because of a low roof the diving was held in Springfield a few weeks before and the State divers Salmela and Pulumbo finished one-two.

Easiest

The season ended in the local chlorine on February 25 with an easy 59-16 win over Boston University.

INDOOR TRACK SEASON

If records were all that mattered, the State indoor track team for '39 wouldn't be able to hold its collective head any higher than a frightened ostrich as the season ended with no wins over a four-meet schedule.

But records are not everything and the club showed promise of a great season next year when the sophomores get just a bit more spike-broken.

Aside from the regular schedule the relay team took part in the Knights of Columbus and B. A. A. meets in the Boston Garden. The K. of C. race found State not quite fast enough and the relay team of O'Conner, Captain Joyce, Klamen and Rossman were anchor team in a three club race. At the B. A. A. run, however, the locals had whipped into shape and placed second to Bates in a fast 3.36.5.

Nutmegs Win

The first home meet of the regular schedule found Conn. State outclassing the locals to the tune of a 54-27 lacing. The Nutmeggers presented a well-balanced team and were too good for Coach Derby's charges. Rice, Conn. State distance star, broke the cage mile record with a 4.36 clocking that found him a lap ahead of his nearest Maroon rival.

W. P. I. Wins

February 22 found W. P. I.'s weak trackers just strong enough to edge the Statesmen 38-34 on the strength of a nine-point sweep in the high jump. Joyce and O'Conner were the stars of the meet for the Maroon. Bob Joyce took a first in the 35-yard dash and also placed third to O'Conner's first in the 600-yard run which broke the cage record. Winn and Rose pulled the day's biggest surprises. Winn ran to a first place in the 1000-yard run while Rose did just as well in the mile.

Tufts Again

Traveling to Medford on February 25, State took a third to Tufts and Worcester Tech in a triangular meet on the Tufts cinders. The Jumbos romped to 71 ½ points while Worcester followed with 28 ½ to State's 18. Captain Joyce and O'Conner showed up well for the locals, the former gaining second place positions in both the fifty-yard dash and in the hurdle events while O'Conner took fourth in the dash and 600-yard run. Crimmins and Rose placed third in the fifty-yard hurdles and the mile respectively while Klamen and Healy rounded out the State score with fourths.

Cards Win

In the final meet of the season Wesleyan's strong runners swamped State 86-27 at Middletown. Ed O'Conner took two firsts, Bob Joyce a second and a third, while Kline, Blasko, Geofrian, Rose, Tillson and Bill Joyce captured the remaining Maroon points. The relay team was edged by the Cardinals in a close race.

OUTDOOR TRACK SEASON

When a State track team isn't very strong it's terribly weak, and the spring team of 1938 was no exception, losing every meet in four tries.

The Maroon track edition was not without stars, it was without strength. Led by Captain Mike Little, the runners were able to grab off quite a few first and second places but when it was necessary for the second Maroon runner to place in the race, he was usually found just rounding the last turn of the lap before.

B. U. Meet

The first meet of the spring season found a strong Boston University club on the Alumni Field Track April 23. The Terriers captured nine firsts with Captain Doug Raymond of the Hub team gaining two firsts to pace his squad. Raymond ran a 50 second quarter and came back to edge Little, State captain, in a 2.3.6 half. A 126 foot, two inch discus toss gave Spike Roberge of the Maroon a record-breaking win. Adams won the javelin and Warren Tappin won the broad jump for other State wins.

Trinity Wins

April 30 found State visiting Hartford where Trinity dropped the Statesmen for a 76-50 count. Little gained firsts in both the quarter and the mile to pace the State club. Corky Adams set a new mark in the javelin hurling spear 170 feet two and a half inches. In other field events Sievers won the discus and Riley won the high jump, but in the running events, except for Little, Coach Derby was clocking his runners with a calendar.

Jumbos Romp

Interfraternity week-end cut in on the State points on May 7 when the track team was supposed to visit Medford for a triangular meet with Tufts and Worcester Tech. Somebody must have showed up because the Sunday papers carried a story that told of the Jumbos beating State and W. P. I. by a count of 71 $\frac{1}{2}$ to Tech's 60 $\frac{1}{2}$ and State's 20 $\frac{1}{2}$. Don McGowan didn't have a date for the Interfraternity Ball and turned in his best jump of college competition to win the broad jump for one of State's two first places. McGowan's body hoist was 22 feet 6 inches. The other Maroon first was made in the high jump when Riley got five feet nine inches off the ground for five points.

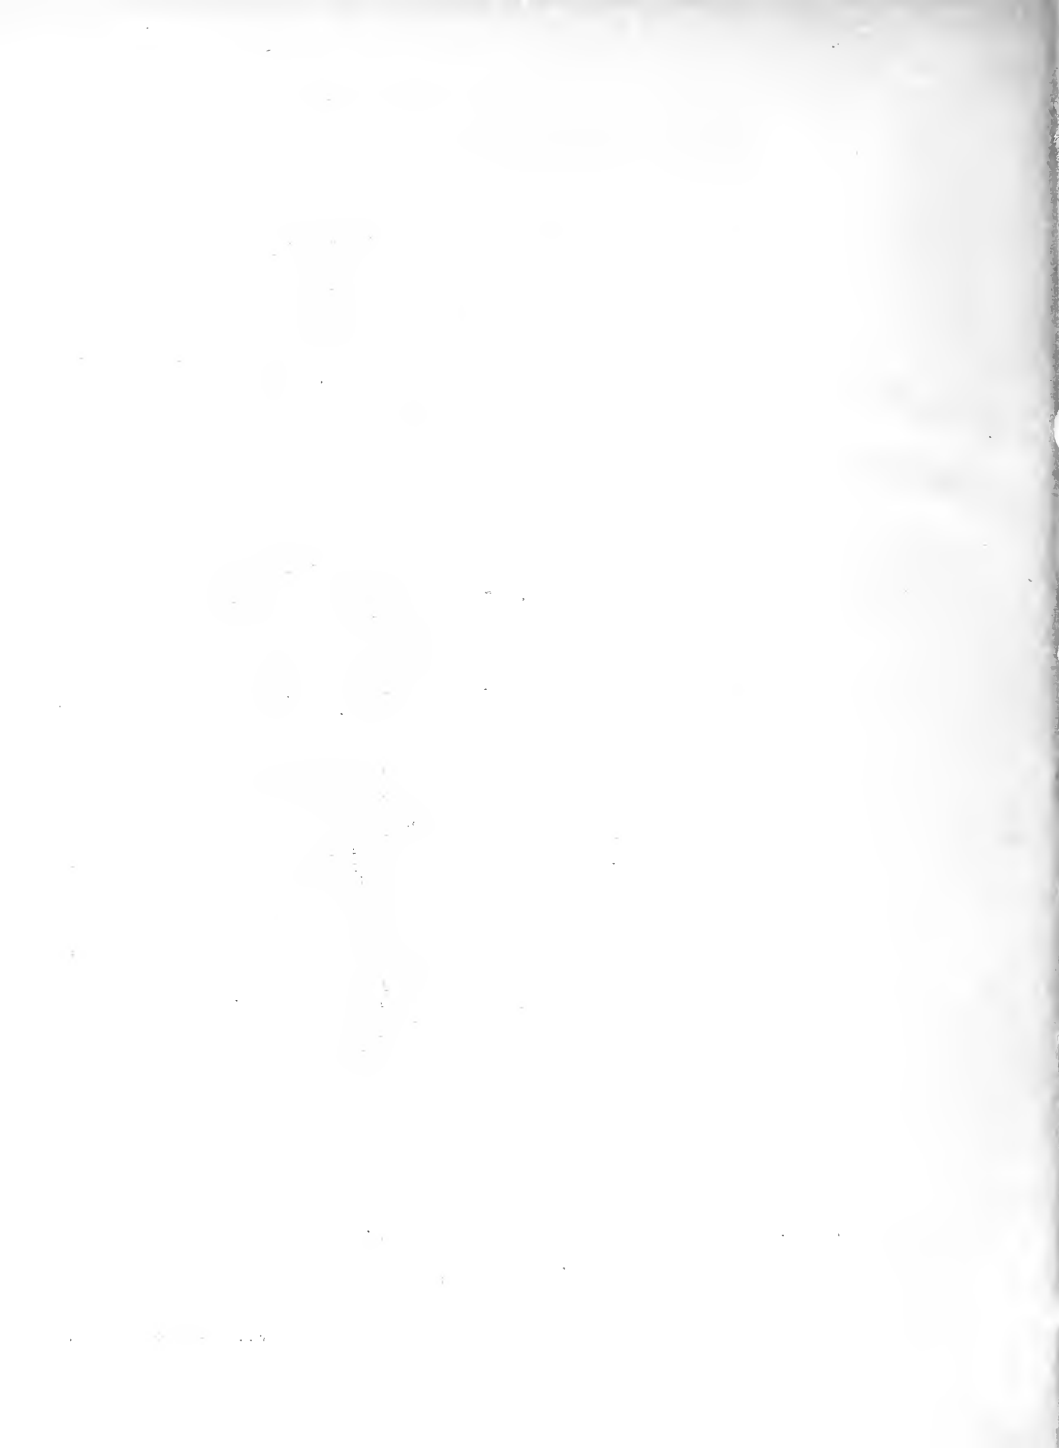

The next week Coach Derby sent a few of his runners to the Eastern Intercollegiate meet at Worcester. Boston University won and State pulled up in ninth place. Bill Riley won the jump event, Adams placed third in the javelin, Little gained a third in the half mile running under the college record, McGowan and Tappin took third and fourth in the broad jump while a freshman relay team, showing great promise of things to come, took fourth in a special freshman event. O'Conner, Crimmins, Bill Joyce, and Frandsen were the runners.

The season closed with Connecticut State easily outclassing the Maroon runners

A hurricane of unprecedented proportions swept with weird results.

After the storm campus buildings were surrounded with fallen trees and debris.

HURRICANE

One of the few things standing before and after the storm was the new sign at the entrance of campus.

Everywhere fallen trees made the campus a tangled jungle of brush. Roads were completely blocked. Fraternity houses were without electricity for two weeks.

The next day classes were called off and students provided with axes and saws aided in the tremendous task of cleaning up the campus. Roads were opened first.

State followers invaded Amherst territory, and on the Amherst common, students fought and scrambled on the ground.

DAD'S DAY

Once a year dads of State students overrun the campus for a day. In the afternoon they filled the stands for the football game with Coast Guard. At the right a middy watches his team.

ROPE PULL

The first tradition to which freshmen are initiated is the annual freshman-sophomore rope pull. The two pictures above show the crowd which gathered to watch this student classic.

The crowd was amused, especially when the vanquished sophomores plunged into the water.

WINTER CARNIVAL

For the first time in three years snow fell abundantly for State's Winter Carnival. It gave skiers a chance to compete on Bull Hill.

The snow also gave co-eds an opportunity to wear ski suits. Above a group poses for news service cameras to provide publicity for the Carnival.

Fraternity members had a chance to try their hands at snow sculpture. Theta Chi's Ferdinand, Phi Sig's King Winter, and Lambda Chi's Winter's Kingdom were judged best.

CARNIVAL

The World's Fair provided inspiration for S. A. E.; Q. T. V. tried animal life; Sig Ep experimented with Gay Nineties costuming (note study lamps used for night illumination); Alpha Sig modelled Diogenes hunting for the most beautiful co-ed.

Nude Life was strikingly portrayed by Kappa Sigma and Alpha Gam. A. E. Pi found originality in a tavern room scene. Sculptures were moulded from frozen snow with hot irons.

Campus funsters had their fun with the snow, too. Sculpture on the right is Ferdinand's mother.

CARNIVAL

Carnival visitors exhibited much interest in the sculpture; many visitors were provided with cameras. At the right President Baker crowns the Queen of the Carnival.

COMMENCEMENT

The traditions of commencement are as old as college life itself. The senior procession on Baccalaureate Sunday starts the formal graduation exercises.

The procession makes its way slowly across campus lawns. It differs in appearance from a procession of thirty years ago only because of the presence of women graduates.

Seated on the platform in the President's Garden, seniors are ready for the commencement address. Impatient with the tradition they are carrying out, they usually find the speech long and tiresome, and are anxious to be off.

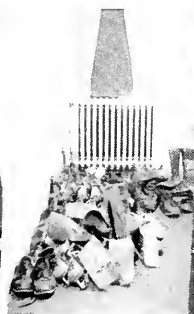

HELL WEEK

Massachusetts State still clings to remnants of hazing, which once brought humiliation and even terror into the lives of freshmen. Most of the hazing now is conducted good naturedly and is enjoyed even by freshmen.

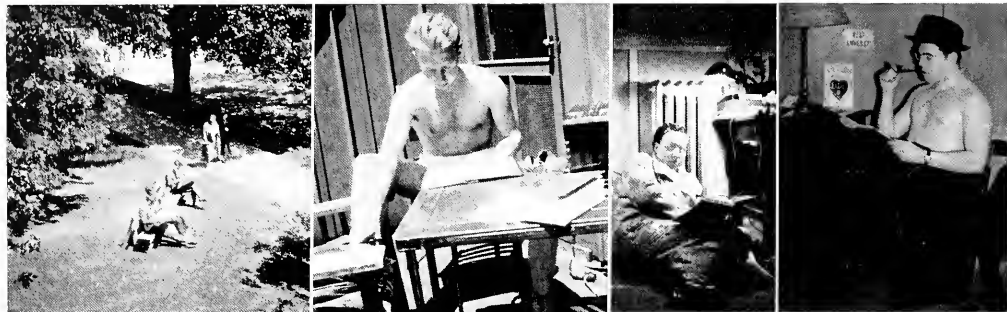

Freshmen who refuse to conform to campus traditions are tried before the Student Senate. Coming from a trial (center above) an unhappy freshman is met by upperclassmen and is escorted to the college pond for a quick dip.

Upperclassmen enjoy Hell Week immensely. The pile of shoes (center above) will soon be attacked and polished by a crew of luckless neophytes.

STUDIES

Just before exam period, students get down to real work. Under pressure some students study minus shirts, or trousers. Others prefer to study unhampered by any clothing at all.

A pipe, many students find, is indispensable to studying.

A counterpart to study is sleep. College students stay up later into the night than other groups in society. As a result they are always tired enough to fall asleep anywhere.

CAMPUS LIFE

The library, familiarly the "libe," is the center of campus life. Students are constantly coming and going. On the right is the quadrangle between classes.

The Collegian office is another center of campus life. From the Collegian windows the library looks actually imposing. Left, a staff member does a reporter act for the photographer.

Between classes, students have much to talk over. Thatcher Hall camaraderie is at its best when books are left behind.

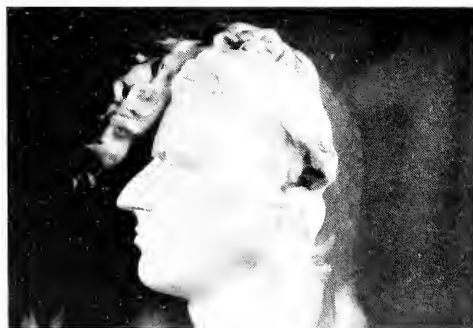

CAMPUS LIFE

Military training is a large part of college life for men students at State. Notice the characteristic pose of Major Connors taking attendance.

A sap bucket excites the curiosity of a coed. State's thrifty Horticulture Manufactures' Department collects maple sap from campus trees every spring.

Cool refreshment from a sorority punch bowl. Don't get the wrong impression from the shot at the left.

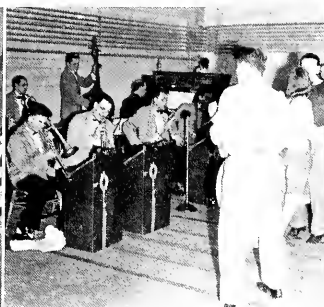

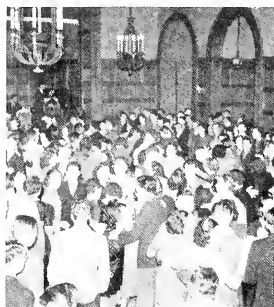

Campus life moves out into the sunlight when spring comes. Co-eds get their tan on the lawn behind the Abbey.

RECREATION

Nearly every weekend there is a dance. The pictures above were taken at an informal dance—an old clothes party—at the Drill Hall.

Dances at State are of many kinds: the freshman reception (left), another old clothes party, and a fraternity house dance.

As a rushing stunt, Lambda Delta Mu sorority gives a modelling show.

RECREATION

Music has played a great part in college recreation this year. Outstanding music event of the year was the combined music clubs' performance at a Social Union.

Dramatic productions involve a great deal of work as well as fun. Actors relax during a rehearsal for the Roister Doister production Stage Door.

The annual horse show during commencement is a unique feature of State's social season. Both co-eds and cadets have an opportunity to display their horsemanship.

FABLES FOR STATE STUDENTS

The Fable of the Reserve Book: I

Joe had an uncle in Honolulu, but that will come later.

The point is that Joe was one of the most industrious students ever to come to the State campus: he was a grind, an out and out grind. Night after night, his Ichabod Crane figure was seen stalking through the stacks of Goodell, until he became an institution there, just as Tom the Cop is an institution. The upper stacks (who has ever seen them?) were thoroughly explored by Joe, for he never left a book untturned. He knew the library cold, and that is your picture of Joe—as much as you'll need of him.

But one windy March night, the twentieth to be exact, Fate stalked the stacks with our friend Joe. It was his custom to appear at the reserve book desk every night and take out a book; you see, he felt that the choicest morsels were the reserve books. Unaware of the tremendous step he was taking, he calmly signed his name (and his life, as you'll soon discover) in that big ledger that holds more awe than the Honor Council. Then he went home. On his book-cluttered desk there lay an unusual object, a transcontinental cablegram. With fluttering, ink-stained fingers, Joe ripped open the envelope and read:

"I AM DYING STOP IF YOU WANT THAT HUNDRED GRAND I PROMISED YOU COME IMMEDIATELY TO HONOLULU STOP OR ELSE STOP—UNCLE SAMUEL"

Joe knew his uncle was not a man who minced words, so he quickly gathered his belongings, including the Book, and flew to Hawaii and Honolulu. Grind or no grind, a hundred grand was a hundred grand. When he got there, it was April first, so his uncle did not die, and Joe didn't get rich, and both went out and got drunk to celebrate April Fool's day.

The incident had changed Joe's philosophy of life and he began to notice things around him, most particularly the hula girls. So Joe stayed in Honolulu and had a great time.

And while the merry hours were ticking away, so did the adding machines, for Joe still had out a reserve book, remember?

September came, the freshmen came, then the upperclassmen came, and with them, repeating this year, sun-bronzed, eyeglass-less Joe—a changed man. He proudly strode into the treasurer's office to pay his bill. But instead of the $65 or so on the bill, Joe was confronted by the amazing total of $506.60! The cashier carefully (and tactfully) explained that $441.60 was added on for that overdue reserve book that was out for 184 days per a dime an hour. But the shock was too much for poor Joe, so that thereupon he went insane. Which seems inconsistent, for if Joe could afford Honolulu, a mere $441.60 shouldn't have made much difference.

Or so the story goes.

MORAL: Never take out a reserve book from the library if you have a rich uncle in Honolulu, and if April 1 is coming around.

The Fable of Freddy the Freshman: II

You should know by now that Freddy was a freshman, which opens up a vast field of possibilities for any fantastic mind. Given a freshman, anything can happen. Well, it did.

Freddy was the kind of freshman that took everything literally. He wrote home every day; he vigorously saluted the Senators; he never forgot to sign his name to the Honor Pledge. But, saddest of all, Freddy said "Hi" to everyone. No matter who would approach him on the campus, Freddy would deliberately go out of his way to say "Hi" to that individual. After a month of "Hi-ing," Freddy got so that he would automatically say "Hi" to the trees, Maud the Mule, or Muggsy the Dog. Freddy would walk around in a daze, intermittently saluting Senators, jumping numerals, and muttering "Hi" under his breath.

Thanksgiving vacation came, and Freddy went home. He "Hi"-ed his little sister, his mother, his father, and all his relatives. They were frightened at first, but they later came to accept it along with Freddy's bright socks and his whistle.

On the last Saturday of vacation, Freddy went into Boston with five dollars in his pocket, in search of a good shirt and some flashy neckties. These purchased, he wended his way home through the busy bustling crowds one finds on Washington Street on the last Saturday of any vacation. There Freddy was in his glory: he greeted every stranger with a brisk, friendly "Hi." People didn't notice him, for people in Boston know that one can find all kinds on Washington St.; finally, some one did notice his greeting, and chaos came to the corner of Summer and Washington Streets. The person was a gaudy Scollay Square blonde, accustomed to sailors and the like, but hardly acquainted with Freddy.

He innocently tossed his hundred and forty-fifth "Hi" (for that day) at her, she gaped, spat out her Wrigley's, and screamed for a cop.

"Masher!" she cried, and a dozen bluecoats carried off, none too gently, Freddy the Masher (as he was later known in Washington Street folk lore).

Today, for all we know, Freddy has a cell mate to whom he never says "Hi," which is hardly unusual, if you know what happened to him.

MORAL: For God's sake, don't say "Hi" to EVERYBODY.

The Fable of Mice and Men: III

The country mouse invited the city mouse to leave the city and spend a few days in the sticks around Amherst.

It was no wonder, therefore, that the two mice were seen one day entering campus.

"What's this place, you say?" squeaked the city mouse.

"It's the state institution, I think," asserted the country mouse,

"Those young people—called maroons, aren't they?"

"Yes, that's a little better than 'idiot'."

"This must be the state place for the insane, huh? But why do they go around loose?"

"Oh, they're harmless."

The city mouse suddenly squeaked and scurried behind a tree.

"Look at this gang of thugs and tramps. O gosh! They look like real maroons. Lookit the patched coats, the dirty overalls, the clod-hoppers, and the torn shirts."

"I think they're going to an Old Clothes Ball—that's what they're saying, but I don't know what they mean," explained the country mouse.

"Wow! Lookit those other fellows in the baggy pants and colored pieces of cloth on their heads. Let's run!"

"Never mind. They're only freshmen."

"What's a freshman?"

"A first year student."

"Is he fresh or sarcastic?"

"No, I've seen some persons called sophomores paddle them so they wouldn't be."

"Well," asked the puzzled city mouse, "why do they call a freshman a freshman?"

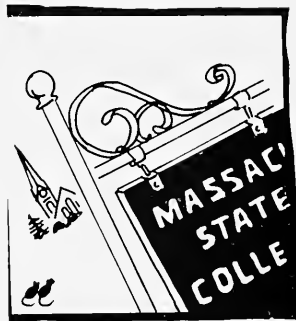

"Search me," said the country mouse.

"Rowdy-dow!" squeaked the city mouse, shook its tail, and hopped away.

"Hey, where are you going, cousin?" asked the country mouse.

"Back to the city—where there aren't any maroons."

MORAL: If you're looking for greener pastures, disregard local hay fields.

The Fable of the Mist and the Missed: IV

We asked one day Professor Pifflephaff's most disgusting experience in his Pat's class.

"Do you remember," said the professor explosively, "the child prodigy we had here at State a few years ago?"

Yes, we did.

Professor Pifflephaff thumped his desk. "He was the stubbornest, ornariest little squirt in creation. Willie Wappleton Wordsworth, Jr. his name was, if I remember right. Day after day, class after class, he'd come in my class trailing his clouds of glory. The nerv-v-v-ve!"

A trick, we agreed with the professor, that the child must have picked up from William Wordsworth, Sr., who picked it up from Plato.

"I threw him out of class, argued with him, and sent him to the Dean, but he still trailed those clouds of glory into my class room," yelled Professor Pifflephaff growing red and purple in the face and throat.

Personally, we informed him tactfully, we think trailing clouds of glory a neat trick and no harm done.

"No harm done?!!!"—here the professor changed the colors in his face like a neon sign from red, white, to blue—"Why, the blasted squirt filled up my classroom with those damp, thick clouds until it was worse than the London fog. I caught asthma. I had to memorize my lecture; I couldn't see. And my rheumatism began to bother me. What's more, my class slept and I didn't know it. All because of that brat and his poetical clouds!"

We nodded wisely. Wordsworth, Jr. should have hung his clouds outside on the hat-rack.

"But fortunately for me," the venerable professor continued, "the little prodigy was shot from behind while he was 'commuting with nature' in the woods between Thatcher and the orchard. So he went back to the Perfect World—and my asthma left me."

"Sad," we said.

"Did I ever tell you about my rifle marksmanship championship?" said Professor Pifflephaff.

MORAL: Now is the time for all good Wordsworth, Jrs. to scam off campus.

The Fable of Androcles and the Caow: V

A young lad, named Androcles, once found a sick cow in the wilds of the common in Amherst with a great thorn in its hoof. Moved by compassion, Androcles removed the thorn, tended the cow before and after classes in Amherst High School, and restored it to health. Then he never saw it for a great while.

Later the two met again. This time it was in the field outside Thatcher Hall. The cow had been captured in the Amherst commons and returned to State College farms. Androcles, himself, also doomed to slavery and higher education, had been thrown into Thatcher Hall. The cow was in the field and Androcles in the frosh dormitory. But the two met only after eight months. During this time Androcles practiced golf when the weather permitted and also played baseball. Thus, alack, he lost dozens of golf balls in the field near the cow and many baseballs. Because of this he went into debt and was about to leave college when the cow came up to him one day and licked his hands.

"I will do anything for you, Androcles, anything that you wish," moored the cow, for this cow could talk—did she not belong to State College?

Androcles told her of his lost golf and base balls.

Thereupon, she turned and led him to the poultry plant. O she was intelligent!

"Here," she crooned softly when they were in the plant, "this short-sighted poultry major found your golf and base balls and killed three hens trying to hatch the 'eggs' in an experiment for his Master's Degree"

MORAL: Some of our best friends are cows.

The Fable of the Credulous Frosh: VI

Once there was a freshman who believed everything that he was told. But within six months at State he flunked out. He was too obedient, paradoxically speaking.

Prexy, in the first week of September, told Joe Freshman to put two hours of study for every class. In next week's rushing, all fraternity men told him that he should spend some of his time socially—in the fraternity bull sessions, poker games, or vic parties. The Dean told Joe, a little later, to engage in an extra-curricular activity—the Roister-Doisters, for example. In the frosh Phys. Ed. course, Joe was talked into putting in two practice periods per week for the freshman football team. Since he planned to be a chem. major, he had to join the chem. club. Lastly, his father considered it a healthy American custom for Joe "to work his way through college."

So, like Don Quixote charging the windmill, our freshman went at his "college life" schedule.

He studied five hours a day. He pledged a fraternity, thereafter attending vic parties and meetings. He joined the Roister-Doisters. He became a member of the chem. club. He worked three hours a day for his meals. And he caught the knack of dressing with his left hand and eating his breakfast with his right.

Soon he was three days behind schedule, then a week behind, and then a month. Came January. He found that he flunked completely.

"I would have pulled through all right," said Joe, "if there were about forty-eight hours in a day."

MORAL: It should be obvious.

WINN STUDIO

It has become a recognized fact in yearbooks, as well as in many other publications, the photographic material surpasses that which is written; surely is not a picture worth a thousand words? It is also true that whatever success the 1939 INDEX may enjoy will be due, to the greatest extent, to the excellent service rendered by Mr. Richard Mahoney of the Studio. We are profoundly grateful to Mr. Mahoney and for the splendid cooperation he has manifested.
